Oh, don't tell me, because you were born too late, and missed out on the last warm period, before the last ice age, you thought the ice age was over -- what? Because you were born and people told you that?

You never thought to question how accurate their information was/is? You never asked how they determined the ice age was over? You never examined any evidence, facts, data?

Well, that is how it goes, huh?

Died July 7, 2011. There sure hasn't been much, if anything, said about this. Back in the day when this was actually a shortwave radio group this would have been a sizzling topic.

You wants to use that Puppy Linux to snoop on doggy's poop? It is inside a Walmart bag which is inside of a big round plastic thingy with a plastic snap on lid wayyy out there by the back fence in my back yard.What it is, when doggy takes a dump out there I stick a stick in the ground near doggy's poop.(I call those shart pointy sticks my Punji Sticks.Do you know what Punji Sticks are?) Then I put doggy back in the house and then I use a plastic dust pan and I put doggy's poop in that round plastic thingy with the snap on lid.Twice each week on Tuesday and Friday mornings I put doggy's poop in the garbage can for the garbage truck to pick up.Real Neat and Tidy.

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area.
Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the | telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead.
Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should
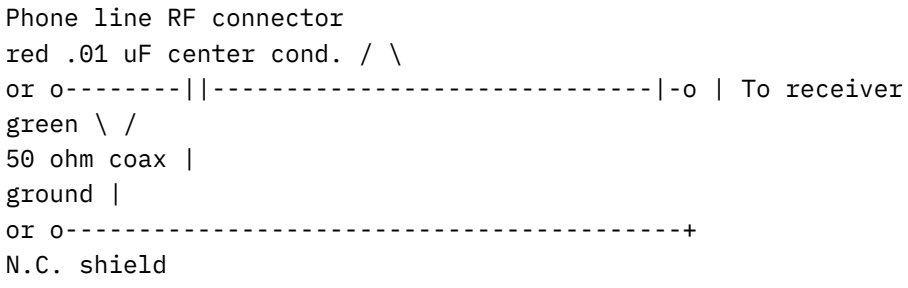
| be rated 250 volts or higher.



N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

| RECOMMENDED FILTERS
| If you don't want to make your own filters, the following have good | performance, are well-built and affordable:
| Model 400 BCB interference filter (3.5 MHz highpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#bcb

| Model 420 HF lowpass filter (30 MHz lowpass)
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/filtersrf.html#3
| (scroll down a bit to see the model 420)
| If you have a random-wire antenna, the following unit will provide | impedance matching and lightning protection (connect antenna to 450-ohm | terminal):
| Model 182A beverage matching unit
| http://www.iceradioproducts.com/reconly.html#Beverage Matching

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

From: bill@videovax.tv.tek.com (William K. McFadden)
Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

From: johns@uhunix.uhcc.Hawaii.Edu (John Shalamskas)
Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics, left and right ends are interchangeable.)

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

Parts for the filters can be obtained from the following source:

I think you mean BIOS setup. The BIOS is the code the computer runs when you first turn it on. It comes from a chip on your motherboard, so it varies from one computer to another. It puts some text on the screen, then gets the operating system from the hard disk. Blink and you'll miss it. Look quickly at the bottom of the screen, it will say something like "Hit ESC for BIOS setup." You want to set the Boot Order so it tries to boot from the CD before the hard drive. If you want to boot from a USB key, the BIOS needs to support that option. On many older computers, it doesn't.

Officials say he died of "natural causes". Bullshit. He was most likely poisoned. His inner circle of "friends" sure seem to be docile considering they don't trust anything government officials, the local yokel little town coroner in this instance, do or say.

I often wondered how long it would take for his enemies to finally murder him. His group has been infiltrated by counter intelligence errand boys for quite a long time.
His son was murdered years ago.

Well, I favor firefox, its' feature and functions are just better than IE, and you have MUCH more control ...

However, that said, there are many situations where it is only logical to use IE. As, people who do not construct their web pages to be properly viewed in all browsers, will have those web pages only be viewed, properly, in IE.

However, all that said, if you are a computer guru, you can use any browser ...

I think you probably have an incomplete picture and are taking absurd conclusions from it.

When you start quoting Alex Jones I know you have gone "over the edge" as they say.

I have no idea where he's getting his data, but a complete small home solar power system would run about $20K for the entire system (solar panels, batteries, pure sine inverter (with charger for batteries). If you want grid intertie, it would cost a little more, perhaps $25K. I have a 2.4 KW system installed here, more than enough to run the house, including refrigerator.
We still need to upgrade our system to make it totally up to snuff (more/larger batteries and a few more panels), but then I only have about $2,000 into the system so far. I'm picking up parts as I can afford them; a total system would be cheaper if bought all at once. Also, I've had to buy small panels (45 watts at a time) because I couldn't get larger ones shipped to me. I've now found a source here in Korea where I can get 200W panels for about $600 each. If I buy 12 of those, I have the complete 2400W system for just $7200 more. Given the outrageous cost of power here, it's a total bargain.

The numbers ended at 0342UTC with the usual 3 'good night's on 6855 kHz.
Also heard a much stronger broadcast (La Chica) - not sure if it was a repeat of material - on 6800 kHz around 0400 UTC. Must have changed the antenna direction or power.

What happens when Good Men do ABSOLUTELY NOTHING?
When they offer up open ended compromise to an Evil which knows none, which has no justification, nor does it seek any.

http://www.libertylive.org/Uploads/The%20Debt%20Star.jpg

DEBTSTAR:: This is NOT the HOPE you have been searching for.

LIBs cannot afford you to realize the Obviousness of the Truth, they intend to first take away your Virtue, and THEN your very LIFE!

Think I'm kidding,
then by all means, continue to do ABSOLUTELY NOTHING, but recognize one thing, the Dead collect NO BENEFITS...

This is the LIBs final solution, how they will balance the budget,
how SOME will be sacrificed so that THEY may live....

LIBS are at War with Reality
-- and in their delusion 'think' they are winning.

They believe they can fake the character of a man,
just as they can fake Reality.

They decry the sins of man as destroying the world.
They curse human nature for its unwillingness to practice their virtue.
A virtue based on sacrifice, demanding more sacrifice at every successive disaster. How soon will we be re-inacting Apocalypto?

In the name of a return to their core values, they have sacrificed all those evils which they held as the cause of their plight...

They have sacrificed justice to mercy.
They have sacrificed independance to unity.
They have sacrificed reason to blind faith in partisanship.
They have sacrificed wealth to need.
They have sacrificed happiness to duty.
They have sacrificed self-esteem to self-denial and self-delusion.

LIB's plead for a Morality which holds COMPROMISE as it's standard of Value, making it possible to judge Virtue on the basis of the number of Values which one is willing to Betray.

To be a LIB:...
All you have to do is to want-to-pretend:

that there REALLY be no difference between FOOD and POISON, and that any mixture of the two could result in anything BUT Death.
that Political Power Grow out the Barrel of a Gun.
that a Rock Throwing Thug just needs Love.
that a Suicide Bomber JUST can't help it.
that one person's success can ONLY come at the expense of another.
that things should be taken from you in the name of the Common Good.

LIBs. What price their Vision?

DESERVE FREEDOM.
DEFEAT LIB STRATEGIC INSANITY.

BE HEARD.
While you still can.
Evil has NO POWER when the Good remain Unafraid.
If Evil wins, it is only because Good Men do Absolutely Nothing.

What it must FEEL LIKE to be the JOKER.

The only Earth in Balance conceivable to the LIBs is one where Mankind become an Endangered Species in a world with cities ablaze with bodies littering the streets, a world where the dead, the Dying, the DISSENTING are carted away in boxcars that rumble night and day to smokestacks that billow without end.

The budget blueprint crafted by Paul Ryan, passed by the House of Representatives, and voted down by the Senate would essentially give Medicare enrollees a voucher to purchase private coverage, and would change the federal government's contribution to each state's Medicaid program from an unlimited "matching" grant to a fixed "block" grant. These reforms deserve to come back from defeat, because the only alternatives for saving Medicare or Medicaid would either dramatically raise tax rates or have the government ration care to the elderly and disabled. What may be less widely appreciated, however, is that the Ryan proposal is our only hope of reducing the crushing levels of fraud in Medicare and Medicaid.

The three most salient characteristics of Medicare and Medicaid fraud are: It's brazen, it's ubiquitous, and it's other people's money, so nobody cares.

Consider some of the fraud schemes discovered in recent years. In Brooklyn, a dentist billed taxpayers for nearly 1,000 procedures in a single day. A Houston doctor with a criminal record took her Medicare billings from zero to $11.6 million in one year; federal agents shut down her clinic but did not charge her with a crime. A high-school dropout, armed with only a laptop computer, submitted more than 140,000 bogus Medicare claims, collecting $105 million. A health plan settled a Medicaid-fraud case in Florida for $138 million. The giant hospital chain Columbia/HCA paid $1.7 billion in fines and pled guilty to more than a dozen felonies related to bribing doctors to help it tap Medicare funds and exaggerating the amount of care delivered to Medicare patients. In New York, Medicaid spending on the human-growth hormone Serostim leapt from $7 million to $50 million in 2001; but it turned out that drug traffickers were getting the drug prescribed as a treatment for AIDS wasting syndrome, then selling it to bodybuilders. And a study of ten states uncovered $27 million in Medicare payments to dead patients.

These anecdotes barely scratch the surface. Judging by official estimates, Medicare and Medicaid lose at least $87 billion per year to fraudulent and otherwise improper payments, and about 10.5 percent of Medicare spending and 8.4 percent of Medicaid spending was improper in 2009. Fraud experts say the official numbers are too low. "Loss rates due to fraud and abuse could be 10 percent, or 20 percent, or even 30 percent in some segments," explained Malcolm Sparrow, a mathematician, Harvard professor, and former police inspector, in congressional testimony. "The overpayment-rate studies the government has relied on . . . have been sadly lacking in rigor, and have therefore produced comfortingly low and quite misleading estimates." In 2005, the New York Times reported that "James Mehmet, who retired in 2001 as chief state investigator of Medicaid fraud and abuse in New York City, said he and his colleagues believed that at least 10 percent of state Medicaid dollars were spent on fraudulent claims, while 20 or 30 percent more were siphoned off by what they termed abuse, meaning unnecessary spending that might not be criminal." And even these experts ignore other, perfectly legal ways of exploiting Medicare and Medicaid, such as when a senior hides and otherwise adjusts his finances so as to appear eligible for Medicaid, or when a state abuses the fact that the federal government matches state Medicaid outlays.

Government watchdogs are well aware of the problem. Every year since 1990, the U.S. Government Accountability Office has released a list of federal programs it considers at a high risk for fraud. Medicare appeared on the very first list and has remained there for 22 straight years. Medicaid assumed its perch eight years ago.

How can there possibly be so much fraud in Medicare and Medicaid that even the "comfortingly low" estimates have ten zeros? How can this much fraud persist decade after decade? How can it be that no one has even tried to measure the problem accurately, much less take it seriously? The answers are in the nature of the beast. Medicare and Medicaid, the two great pillars of Pres. Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" agenda, are monuments to the left-wing ideals of coerced charity and centralized economic planning. The staggering levels of fraud in these programs can be explained by the fact that the politicians, bureaucrats, patients, and health-care providers who administer and participate in them are spending other people's money — and nobody spends other people's money as carefully as he spends his own. What's more, Medicare and Medicaid are spending other people's money in vast quantities. Medicare, for example, is the largest purchaser of medical goods and services in the world. It will spend $572 billion in 2011. Each year, it pays 1.2 billion claims to 1.2 million health-care providers on behalf of 47 million enrollees.

However, "they" fool far too many into viewing their lives, politics, the world, reality, etc. as a football game, where you pick a side and root for it while making slurs on the other team.

It is a farce ... republicrats vs. democans is a show/theater/game/shill/etc. I can do with out.

Liberals vs. conservatives is only a slight variation of these standard "fools games."

One factor of why vegetarians look sickly, fragile, the males "feminized", etc. is the lack of Carnitine in their diets. There are no good sources of it in the plant kingdom, red meat is the best source.

When "being a vegetarian" was much more in vogue, in past years, decades, it was amazing how many were damaging their health by their ignorance of the importance of it to their health. Knowledgeable vegetarians buy it from health food stores as a dietary supplement -- the best are processed from meats.

When you see a "total vegetarian", you are viewing a true nutcase whose mental disorder(s) with little regard for their health. However, these same people will tell you, "I am a vegetarian" as if it is something desirable!

Through personal observation, there seems to be a relationship between homosexuality and vegetarianism ... but, I have seen homosexuals proclaiming just the exact opposite, and meat eaters have the highest statistics of transgender operations. And, this is probably true ... since meat eating is practiced by the overwhelming majority of the population. However, I still think there is a link there, but statistics are hard to come by ... a usual indication of a coverup implemented because of political correctness.

Lack of Carnitine, in a diet, is significantly related to heart problems/disease ... but, I do try to eat a healthy amount of plant material in my diet.

Regards,
JS

You are clearly demonstrating your lack of knowledge.

Just why do you think Medicare was created?

As you obviously are clueless, let me give you the answer:

The private insurance industry WOULD NOT TOUCH senior citizens (or if they would, it was outrageously expensive -- read "unaffordable" -- for seniors on limited or fixed incomes).

So THAT is why Medicare was created.

...and you are touting turning it back to the private insurance industry? Good luck with that!

And? I get offers from credit card companies all the time, offering me

I had no idea doctors were so amoral (they should go into politics or big business).

You make a great case for "single payer (Medicare for all!)" health care reform. The growth in expenses in medicine are completely unwarranted and can only be explained by wanton greed.

Greed, as a central idea to build a system around, yields a lot of velvet paintings

<chuckles> People that can't get a credit card have other problems... you know what they are...

As for me, I've never been turned down for credit.. not ever... I carry only one credit card for emergency use.. I also use it for a few auto payments like my sunpass toll road account and paypal because

I never allow automatic access to my checking accounts or their debit cards...

I pay it in full at least once a month.. sometimes more often... with a simple click on my online banking site.

Czar (Tsar?) is a backstage working term concocted by lazy reporters who understandably are tired of saying "special assistant to the vice-chairman" type titles for people. It is not an official term and it has no official meaning.

How far do you get in the questionnaire part of the offer? Diabetes?
Hypertension? etc.

Universal care is the only successful logical conclusion going forward.

The Roots of Obama's Rage

The real Obama is a man shaped by experiences far different from those of most Americans; he is a much stranger, more determined, and exponentially more dangerous man than you'd ever imagined. He is not motivated by the civil rights struggles of African Americans in the 1960s—those battles leave him wholly untouched. He is not motivated by the socialist or Marxist propaganda that hypnotized a whole generation of wooly-minded academics and condescending liberals—those concepts also leave him cold.

What really motivates Barack Obama is an inherited rage—an often masked, but profound rage that comes from his African father; an anticolonialist rage against Western dominance, and most especially against the wealth and power of the very nation Barack Obama now leads. It is this rage that explains the previously inexplicable, and that gives us a startling look at what might lie ahead.

In The Roots of Obama's Rage you'll learn: Why Obama's economic policies are actually designed to make America poorer compared to the rest of the world Why Obama will welcome a nuclear Iran Why Obama sees America as a rogue nation—worse than North Korea The real reason Obama banished a bust of Winston Churchill from the White House and ordered NASA to praise the scientific contributions of Muslims Why Obama would like to make America's superpower status a thing of the past

Stunning, provocative, original, and telling—no one has better diagnosed who Obama is, what he intends to do, and why he poses an existential threat to America than Dinesh D'Souza in The Roots of Obama's Rage.

Trio as in the company that is now called Kenwood. The r in Trio makes it difficult for Japanese to pronounce it in such way that people who do not speak Japanese understand what they are saying. So they picked the name Kenwood because it is close enough in Japanese to English, etc.

I have a radio marked Trio/Kenwood and a later one just marked Kenwood.

Note that they are NO relation to the British Company Kenwood which makes appliances. The British company was founded in the 1950's by Kenneth Wood, and IMHO it is likely his products made their way to Japan.

Update: Further analysis of the CME from center disk earlier Tuesday suggests G1 (Minor) Geomagnetic Storm activity to begin very late (UTC) on August 4, and linger for approximately 24 hours. High latitudes may experience isolated intervals of G2 (Moderate) conditions.

The inside of a Hallicrafters consumer/amateur radio is pretty scary. I think they had bad ventilation in the factory or something. The postwar Japanese consumer radios were much cleaner than your typical Zenith.

Nah, not bullshit, just lack of critical thinking on your part...just because you received junk mail "offers" does NOT mean you will be accepted...and if you are accepted, at what cost? To say nothing of your age and any "pre-existing" conditions you may have. Also, what kind of financial stability do these "junk mail" offers have? Even if -you- are young enough to be approved by the junk mailers, what about somebody that's 80 plus with pre-existing conditions, hmmm? Are you gullible enough to think -they- will be approved at a price they can afford?

Finally, you seem to have missed the original point of my post, namely, WHY Medicare came into being. Just because you got "offers" three decades later does NOT disprove the fact that Medicare came into being (in the 70s) because the "private insurance companies" would not touch the elderly. Please pay attention.

Right now Medicare pays for extraordinary near-EOL procedures that NO private insurer would ever even consider. Not even close. Personally, I'm not going to waste $200,000 of the taxpayer's money to live another few weeks. The only thing proposed is that we have the conversation.

I've never sued anyone but private health insurance companies when they cheated.
I sued them three times.
They paid each time plus costs in the courthouse corridor because they knew what they would get from the judge.

You trust your life to people in the protection racket!

Mil-Spec isn't any big Brou Ha Ha to me.In fact, some of that Army
Mil-Spec chow was terrible.A lot of times I would go down town to a cafe or restaurant for chow.In our mess halls in Vietnam it was mostly C-Rats.They used to dump those C-Rats in big aluminum metal pans with handles on the sides of those metal pans and heat them up, all of the milk was powdered milk.I used to go to a hotel on TuDo street in Saigon and drink Elephants milk, it was Real Good.I am NOT joking.

My best socket wrench was made in Korea.It had a straight knurled handle on it.When it got greasy and grimey, mostly using it on my vehicles, I could still use it just fine.After about forty years of hard heavy use, it finially broke.Snap On's slick smooth tapered handles/socket wrenches aren't worth a Sheet!

I drill through the first 2 X 4 with an 1/8 inch metal bit first. Then, the screw only has to fight it's way into the second piece of wood. It makes it a lot easier to keep the wood surfaces together.

If both pieces of wood are threaded by the screw, the screw will try to push the two pieces apart when it gets through the first one.

It can be hard holding them together tightly as the screw goes through. You're lucky to get a tight fit.

Do yourself a favour, drill that first piece of wood. Some people will dip the screw into some wax. That makes life easier. I prefer the 1/8 inch hole

I would like to connect the rx320 to a small laptop computer. It has only USB ports. The rx320 has a nine pin serial port.

Being cheap I would like to build the cable. Any sources for schematics out there?

Thanks for any advice...

I use a double serial (DB9) to single USB converter made by a company callled Digitech.

It comes with a small drivers disk.

I can connect two Icoms (IC-R75 and IC-8500) into USB port., works well.

Found in the latest Jaycar catalogue here, http://www.jaycar.com.au/productView.asp?ID=XC4834&keywords=usb+converter&form=KEYWORD

They only list a single connector now but it's something to work on !

In the catalogue it's Cat # XC4901, Page 453.

Good luck !

I'd use proper holes and proper hardware (nuts and bolts and washers).
That requires a drill motor, and a drill bit. Mil-Spec refers to radios that have lockwashers.

There are specific chipsets that have drivers built into your OS kernels ("plug'n'play). I don't know where you'd buy them in small quantities, and I'm not sure if it's be cheaper than an old Belkin Palm Pilot sync cable, which is the most "Plug'n'Play" of the USB to Serial adapters I've found. They are still in "clearance" some places.

Conduct Unbecoming Part I

Over the next two years, however, my experiences in the Clinton White House turned my gratitude and awe into shock, revulsion, and sorrow as I experienced the cavalier and self-serving way Clinton went about the business of running our country. I wrote my first book, Dereliction of Duty, documenting our former President's contempt for the military, his indifference to important issues except insofar as they served his own political or personal purposes, and his failure to accept his responsibilities as our commander-in-chief. Indeed, it is my sincere belief that the dereliction of duty and negligence of Bill Clinton paved the way for the tragic events and deaths of September 11, 2001.

Obama's Secret Link to Hamas, Part II

At the time I left my position in the Clinton White House I certainly couldn't have imagined we'd elect anyone more inept than Bill Clinton. Nor could I have predicted that just seven years after we'd been attacked and gone to war, we'd elect the most radical left-wing president in our nation's history. Few seem to have noticed, until recently, that Barack Obama is inclined to dispense with the key precepts our forefathers valued: a robust defense of American sovereignty and our national interest for one; limited government for another; fiscal prudence for a third.

I have built four sets of tall shelves already, about eight feet tall, one inch thick boards for the shelves.I use some steel brackets to

Here in South Florida, the damn Cuban stations, both in Cuba and in Miami, swamp almost every frequency. Last night, I was able for about 30 minutes to null the Cubans to get WBZ on 1030. Also, WPHT, 1210, which is also a station in Cuba booming out their crap. Strangely, the higher frequencies can be pulled in pretty well, 1520, Buffalo, NY, for example. Still using the HE-10 and loving it!

Actually, I think being a vegetarian is desirable. I'm very healthy, am certainly not sickly or feminized, and I've been a vegetarian since I was twenty and have never taken carnitine. Here are some recent pictures of me:

The human animal is an omnivore. It's not specifically tied to any dietary protocols, and is adaptive to what is available generally, or at hand.

For thousands of years, food was in limited supply to humans, and they ate what was at hand. Meat, red or otherwise, was only a small part of the diet. More an accent than a staple.

When properly implemented, and with broad enough range, vegetarianism, is, often, though not always, a healthy lifestyle. The key is proper management of intake.

The idea that diet is a causal link to sexual orientation is amusing, but nonsense. Though there may be a coincidental relationship forged by trend, politics, and/or cultural influences. And the lack of statistics don't necessarily indicate a coverup of political agenda. Sometimes there are no such statistics because they don't exist.

There are no numbers linking daffodil color to rock formation, either. That doesn't mean the government is hiding something.

Human critters first started eating meat after the non human critters had gorged themselves and left some meat on the bones of critters they had killed.Perhaps Lightning had caused some of that leftover meat to be cooked and the Human critters said something like, Hey that taste better!

Men have boobs because all Human male critters were female critters up to about two weeks in the womb.Yes, you used to be a Girl.Just because I wish I my boobs were basketball size boobs does not mean I am feminized.A lot of normal men wouldn't mind if they had Bigguns.Actually, I wish I looked just like Jane Mansfield.

No. You are wrong. You cannot even read plain English in your own link.
If you were a lawyer you'd be disbarred.

MIL-SPEC Defense Specification A document that describes the essential technical requirements for purchased material that is military unique or substantially modified commercial items. MIL-STD-961 covers the content and format for defense specifications.

We evolved eating roadkill and berries. Factory production of meat creates as much pollution as transportation. Going vegetarian one day a week is like taking millions of cars off the road.

Interesting bit of obfuscation, however, we have incisors for a very good reason, tearing up meat. But true, we probably competed with hyenas for the "left overs from the table." Most likely, during our early years, we ate a lot of rats and other vermin, also. (and snails, slugs, bugs, larvae, worms, etc.)

You simply cannot live on a meatless diet without severe harm to your physical and mental states ... carnitine is only one reason why.
Cavemen didn't have the luxury of health store supplements to aid them in a vegetarian existence.

Why not? Those who benefit the most from the economy -- by definition, those in the top 1% or 2% of earners -- should bear most

Liberty Net: July 30, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/08/liberty-net-july-30-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

ONE INTERESTING THING about the Liberty Net is the convergence of ï¿½leftï¿½ and ï¿½rightï¿½ toward truth and consensus that often happens there ï¿½ false political categorizations fall away between the hammer of debate and the anvil of facts.

Here are some notes ï¿½ just a small sampling, really ï¿½ from the most recent session of the most exciting net on the amateur airwaves:

ï¿½ A subpoena has now been issued to allow a typesetting and scanning expert to see the actual paper document that was allegedly the basis for the PDF ï¿½long form birth certificateï¿½ released on the White House Web site. (22 minutes)

ï¿½ Two and a half billion dollars of US taxpayer money has been given recently to Afghan transportation companies, supposedly to ï¿½promote businessï¿½ in that country, which has been devastated by the US invasion. It has now been revealed that a substantial portion of that money goes to 1) bribes to corrupt police and other officials of the US-installed puppet government there, and 2) directly to the Taliban, to ï¿½guarantee safe passageï¿½ of the trucks in question. (25 minutes)

ï¿½ In one Arizona town, the mayor and other town officials have been arrested, and de facto martial law imposed, because the officials were ï¿½disrespectful to the police.ï¿½ (1 hour 44 minutes)

You know what lockwashers look like.The new ones have sharp (sort of kind of sharp) edges/ends on them, that helps them do their thingy.Old, or reused lock washers are not good.Use new lockwashers.Bit, if they are made in China, it is probally a moot point.

I've got a nice Bulova watch made in 1942 that I finally got around to doing a minor repair on a few weeks ago. It was probably ticking away at the time the bomb was dropped, and even better, it was probably ticking on D-Day.

Way cool to wear it from time to time!

At any rate, be certain to listen to Radio Japan on August 9 as well.

My first wristwatch was a Gruen 17 jewels, it had a rectangular dial and the little bitty second hand was near the bottom (or the top, I forget exactaly) of the dial, it had a leather wrist band.I was about 11 or 12 years old when my dad gave me that wristwatch for my birthday.
I quit wearing a wristwatch back around 1990.

The cheap quartz digital timepiece I wear on my shirt has a little bitty snap hook on the short strap.I wear it the third button hole from the top on my shirt.I bought it over two years ago for one dollar at the Dollar Tree store, everything is one dollar each.It is a cheap piece of junk, it has old paint splatters on it.It won't die, the battery is still working OK.

This one is quite similar. Rec. dial, itty bitty second hand at the bottom. 21 jewels (though some were apparently made with 17).

Sold with an original list price of $29.95 back in '42. This one belonged to either my Father or Grandfather.

You do have interesting taste in watches. Mine are more pedestrian. With the exception of the one I had custom made when I won the companywide promo contest at CBS.

Although I do have an 1896 Elgin railroad watch, (lever set) under a bell jar on my desk. Still keeps pretty good time.

My taste only goes to what I guess I inherited! Though, I did buy and sell a few Rolex back in the day. The one I still have was purchased for my Father, who passed away 20 years ago next month.

I did have an Illinois pocket watch, think it may have been a lever set. Had to open the back of the case to set it. Guess it was a railroad watch, and belonged to my Grandfather.

Stupidly, I sold it on eBay.

That's a shame. A classic piece. And they're commanding decent prices, today.

It also makes a pretty good impression on formal occasions. A classic tux, with a watch chain and a 115 year old Elgin...it makes a statement.

ARLP031 Propagation de K7RA

Solar activity increased markedly this week, with the sunspot number rising to 130 on Monday, August 1, the highest since a reading of 131 on April 14, 2011. Average daily sunspot number more than doubled this week compared to last, rising nearly 54 points to 99.3.

On Thursday I received a Significant Event Report from Rob Steenburgh, KA8JBY, Space Weather Forecaster at NOAA Space Weather Prediction Center:

"A trio of significant active regions produced a series of radio blackout (solar flare) events in the past few days. To date, three radio blackouts reaching the R2 (Moderate) level have been observed. Earth-directed coronal mass ejections have been associated with each of the biggest radio blackout events on August 2-4. Solar radiation enhancements have also occurred in conjunction with each of these events, with the solar radiation storm event threshold being exceeded to reach the S1 (Minor) level in conjunction with the August 4 event".

"Three coronal mass ejections (CMEs) are currently en route to Earth, with the commencement of geomagnetic storming expected early to mid-day on August 5 with the arrival of the CMEs associated with the August 2-3 events. The third of the string, seemingly the fastest CME, may catch up with the first two in the next 12-18 hours, compressing the plasma and enhancing the embedded magnetic field. Storming levels are expected to attain G3 (Strong) conditions. The current Solar Radiation Storm may experience a kick with the shocks, and attain S2 (Moderate) thresholds".

"Some level of geomagnetic disturbance is expected to continue through August 7 as the series of CMEs affect the Earth. Continued activity is likely from these regions as they continue to rotate off the visible solar disk over the next 7 days. The Space Weather Prediction Center will continue to monitor this event as it unfolds".

Thanks, Rob!

A NASA video shows a couple of the CMEs. Check http://www.nasa.gov/mission_pages/sunearth/news/News080411-dblpunch.html.

The latest forecast on Thursday night has planetary A index for August 5-9 at 50, 30, 20, 15, and 10, then 8 on August 10-12, then 5, 8, 10, 15, 12, 10 and 8 on August 13-19. Solar flux predicted for August 5 is 115, 110 on August 6-7, 100 and 95 on August 8-9, then 85 on August 10-12, then 100 on August 13-16.

The planetary A index at 50 is quite high.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts active conditions on August 5-7, unsettled to active August 8, quiet to unsettled August 9, and quiet conditions August 10-11.

July is over, so let's look at some of the numbers. The average daily sunspot number for the month of July was 67.2, up from 55.5 for June. The moving three month average of daily sunspot numbers for May through July, centered on June was 61.5. The 3-month moving average centered on January through June was 35.3, 55.7, 72.3, 74.4, 65.9 and 61.5.

Vince Varnas, W7FA of Portland, Oregon wrote on July 30: "For the last week the ST0R DXpedition to South Sudan has had very weak signal strength here in the Portland area, particularly at night on the 17 meter band (18 MHz). Generally they are S-3, at best".

"At 0209 UTC on July 30 there was a M9 solar flare from a big sunspot. At 0522 UTC I heard and worked the ST0R station on CW with much, much louder signal strength, both directions. (They were at the noise or slightly above a few hours earlier. When I worked them on SSB on July 26 at 2303 UTC they were about S-4.) They were S-8 to 9 on the S-meter. The difference in signal strength between 'normal' and last night was about 30 db. Since it is a scientific fact that solar flares can and do enhance the reflectivity of the F layer, my conclusion is that this is what produced the markedly stronger signals from ST0R".

Thanks, Vince.

Sergej Ignatov, UZ2HZ of Kremenchug, Ukraine asked about a link to the Penticton source for thrice-daily solar flux readings, as the link he was using no longer works. Yes, they changed servers again, so the URL has changed. Try ftp://ftp.geolab.nrcan.gc.ca/data/solar_flux/daily_flux_values/fluxtable.txt in your web browser. The column you want is third from the right, the observed flux values, and the local noon (2000z) readings. Although readings are taken three times per day, the noon reading is the official solar flux for the day, also shown at http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpdir/indices/DSD.txt in whole number resolution.

As geomagnetic conditions change over the next few days, you can check http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpdir/indices/DGD.txt for the planetary K index, updated every three hours. You can also check out http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpmenu/forecasts/45DF.html every day after 2100z for an updated daily forecast of solar flux and planetary A index.

Joe Molon, KA1PPV of Stamford, Connecticut writes: "Well it happened again. Not much happening southbound but this time the door to Europe was wide open.

I had heard about the M Class flare and decided to check up on solar conditions because I knew it might get really good before it goes into the toilet. I saw a SF of 116 with an A Index of 3 and a K Index of 1 and that is all I needed.

In one hour I logged IZ5RVG, DL2OCE, IC8TEM, IZ5MXA and EB5DZC.

Not that unusual for someone running 100W into a beam but, as usual, I did it the hard way with 1.5 watts all on 20 meters. Got 599 on all except for the last when the noise crept up.

I was using my Small Wonder Labs PSK kit for 20m with 1.5W into a Diamond BB7V 25 feet AGL. The propagation Gods opened the gate and I walked right through. Wow! It was great to get everyone that I tried for. That never happens in QRPland. Good DX. Yep! It's about time! Now watch the power grid get knocked out tomorrow when the CME shows up!"

Thanks, Joe! Sounds like fun.

Somehow, I don't envision myself ever wearing a tux...

It just ain't me.

Nice pair of Levi's, different question. I'm from the rogue side of the family.

How would that work without a compass and a very accurate map? I would think they'd use telegraph lines to "synchronize" their clocks. The telegraph and the railroad went hand in hand you know.

Nothing wrong with that.

I only have to for work, or occasionally for an event related to work. And one other time for family. Other than that, I'm lucky if I'm wearing pants.

But a nice pocket watch, and a clean pair of Levi's, makes a statement in its own right. You'd need a vintage watch chain, though. Someone may be selling one on eBay. :)

And, I live in an interesting place. Was shopping down at the corner a bit ago, and met a fellow who was, or may still be, in the band Be-Bop Deluxe.

Seems a ton of folk have places here on or near the lakeshore.

I can recall running into Don Rumsfeld in the same store.

There's a flea market at Kane County every month, and two watch vendors with some interesting, and relatively offbeat pieces. I'll keep an eye out for you.

Gee, there are twice as many of these hardline, lunatic fringe, extremist, radical, tea-bagging terrorists as there are liberals.
Obviously this will be major news.

Some FSK at around 50 baud is to be heard on the HF spectrum these days.
Almost none of it is the start-stop radioteletype that was much to be heard 50 years ago. So I'm curious who is still using FSK and why?

We have been informed by the readers of rec.radio.shortwave that a | recent (2008) attempt to update these documents and post them (or links | to them) at regular intervals, has since been abandoned, so the project | is once again open to a sincere and motivated volunteer. |

We are interested in offering any technical support necessary to get these articles updated and automatically posted again at regular intervals. This would include establishing contact with the original

Speaking of the "lunatic fringe" tea-baggers...

One of the speakers at Texas Governor Rick Perry's prayer meetin' says that the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor was a gift from the French Freemasons and is a (are you ready?)...a DEMONIC ICON.

It don't get any more lunatic fringe than that. You go, Ricky!

I hope he is eventually tried for his crimes, and forced to pay damages to those he has harmed.

Of course, the actual damages would exceed his ability to pay by many trillions of dollars, and any semblance of justice would require that he pay punitive damages astronomically higher than that.

Such payments are obviously impossible for him, but the symbolism and example-making are important. His real employers could easily be uncovered in anything approaching a real investigation, though -- and they have deep pockets indeed.

With all good wishes,

Kevin Alfred Strom.

Tea Party Terrorists running rampant!

Buoyed by their success in the recent debt ceiling debate, Tea Party terrorists have set their cross-hairs on new targets : private citizens!

Joe Maxwell, a 43-year-old accountant, was apprehended Tuesday by a gang of armed, masked Tea Party terrorists. As he later related, they put a gun to his head and demanded that he pay off his credit cards. Then the terrorists engaged into another act of terror by forcing Maxwell to adopt a monthly budgeting plan so that he could live within his means.

"It was horrible, but what else could I do? They were going to blow my head off" Maxwell said later, after speaking to reporters, "I have to live on my $75,000 a year salary without borrowing - and I have to start paying off my mortgage on time every month. It's like my freedom of choice has been taken away from me."

Other victims report similar acts of terror - masked gunmen armed with deadly explosives and poison gas are breaking into people's homes and forcing them to assume financial responsibility. One victim, a semi-retarded Welfare recipient named Sid9, who did not wish to give his last name, related that the terrorists forced him to stop buying drugs with his government supplied stipend, but made him purchase (and use)personal hygiene items instead.

The Jews had not declared war on anyone.
The Japanese had declared war AFTER attacking Pearl Harbor.
Big Difference.
Also prevented casualties estimated in the hundreds of thousands if not millions invading the Japanese mainland to end the war.
I remember it well, and having a family member in the military, at the time, was in favor as were most Americans.

Before the American Civil War, most communities got along pretty well using "local time". This was usually determined locally by the position of the sun at midday, Noon being when the sun was directly overhead, displaying the shortest shadow on a sundial or other local indicator. Folks who carried watches set them by this crude local standard and pretty much went on about their business without any problems. Since it usually took days to travel to anyplace else, time in one place ran along pretty much independently of Time in another place.

Better watches were soon developed, and as more people began carrying timepieces and becoming aware of the necessity for accurate time during the industrial age, the problem of just how to keep everyone's watch and clock reading the same time began to come up. For a single community, the steam whistle on a local factory, mill or mine was often used as a synchronizing signal, with a long blast at exactly the Noon hour. This tradition was and still is kept in many communities. While this sort of synchronizing method worked pretty well locally, real problems began to show up when railroads and the telegraph began to span more than a few hundred miles east and west.

Soon, it was discovered that railroad crews would begin their run at one end of a division with their watches set to the proper time, and find that when they arrived at the other end of their run, their watches would be many minutes off as compared to the "local" time of their arrival point. The difference in longitude was small, but had more than a noticeable effect on the difference in time observed at each end of the run. This obviously raised hell with schedules and connections with other railroads. The use of the telegraph in dispatching trains more or less forced the railroad offices along the line to remain on the same time, but the problem of "railroad" time and "local" time not being the same, continued to cause problems all over the country.

There were no established time "zones" and in general, the time situation was becoming chaotic. A quick look at the history books tells us that the US Naval Observatory began transmitting time signals to Washington D.C. in 1865 by telegraph, with the natural extension of this service via Western Union telegraph lines to railroads all across the nation. This proved an excellent solution to the time problem, as the nearly instantaneous transmission of time signals over the telegraph wires allowed electrical or manual synchronizing of clocks and watches at any point the telegraph wires reached.

To make things more "normal" to humans, who seem to like "Noon" to be when the sun is "straight up", the four "time zones" "Eastern", "Central", "Mountain", and "Pacific" were established and the standard time in these zones, "adjusted" so as to be an hour different east to west, keeping "noon" close to where it should occur in the day as the sun passed overhead. After about 1865, synchronizing time was traditionally done on the U.S. Railroads and in the larger cities in conjunction with the Western Union standard time signals. Western Union synchronized their main office clocks in the larger cities by telegraph, electrically, with the U.S. Naval Observatory.

These clocks were large weight driven pendulum types and were synchronized daily with the signal from the USNO, and tied into the time service switchboard. This time service switchboard, or "clock board" as it was known, was basically a switchboard terminating loop circuits with special relays, which were cut into Morse wires and city clock circuits to jewelry stores, banks etc. taking battery in that office. Contact closures in the master synchronized clock operated the switchboard clock loops, which in turn sent the signals out over the telegraph wires and clock circuits to the subscribers. At High Noon E.S.T., the standard time signal was thereby transmitted to every office cut in on every telegraph wire. The Western Union synchronized main office clocks furnished the synchronizing signal to the clock board continuously, which sent synchronizing signals to the time service subscribers each hour.

On the Morse wires, the time signal began a couple of minutes before the hour, and came across the wire as a "click" each second, until a few seconds before the exact hour, then a pause, and then a final "click" right exactly at "The Hour". The wire would then close, and be available for regular work. All railroad operations people (Engineers, Firemen, Brakemen, Conductors, Section Foremen, Dispatchers, Telegraphers, etc.) were required to carry a standard, Railroad approved, 21 jewel pocket watch (the only wrist watch allowed up until about 1975 was the Bulova "Accutron"), and an up-to-date watch inspection card at all times while on duty. (You could count on being fired or at least put on suspension if you got caught working without these two items and a Company timetable in your possession.)

I'm waiting for Obama to start chucking spears and promising everyone their own hut and and a $12 stipend a year.

Actually VA facilities are quite good, but if you Canucky niggahs poke around one might find a lot of things wrong.

The point lost completely here is that once we got instant communications via telegraph the sundial as an instrument of government was finished. It was on shaky grounds already because of trains.

Racist? Pick the race. Our President is of mixed race, some say 50-50.

I myself am of mixed race.

I pick on the boy because of his stupid policies!

So, Rickmers, throw away your pack of race cards.

"da", "dis", "hep me", "muh", etc., are all "negro dialect" used to highlight some implied deficiency based on the race of the mockee.

If you had a brain you'd be dangerous. Fortunately WLS has taken care of that. Electronic lobotomy from across the lake (which your governor

"Class Warfare" is euphemism for "open your eyes; they are robbing both of us blind!".

The system is so broken, top to bottom, that a Revolution is certain. We will either go full-on fascist, or we will join the rest of the civilized world and have an honest transparent liberal democratic republic.

This is all beside the point and irrelevant. Science is not about convincing paid skeptics or the audience of accountants and plumbers and bus drivers and pet store owners. It is not about being popular or witty. It is about finding the answers to physical questions by using data, measurement, tests and repetition. That is has always been the case, and and will always be the case.

In other words, the fact that this "debate" exhibited better showmanship by the P. T. Barnums and Florence Ziegfelds of the pseudoscience world means nothing.

The only 'showmanship' is that exhibited by Al Gore and the other clown 'tards.

Do some research Bruce, look at the historical record, and you'll find that climate has been changing since day one, and the reality is that ultimately, when the sun reaches it's last days, the earth will burn, and will be merely a rock somewhere in the grand scheme of things.

If, as many of you seem wont to do, and that is, tax folks, then I suggest you get your wallet out and send in a bit extra come April.

I suggest that you tell Boy Barry the same thing, as on his last return he took advantage of the 'Bush' tax measures.

Did he get out his wallet, or whatever the folks from the 'hood' carry these days and send in a bit extra? No, he did not.

Your Boy Barry is a liar.

In the Summer time, Earth is farther away from the Sun than in the Winter time.Bit, Earth's Northern Hemisphere is tilted more toward the Sun and receiving more Sun light than in the Winter time.

I still (jokeingly) say it is all that 'Ether' that is doing it.

Then you better tell you Boy Soros that, and ask him why he has US citizenship and still works to undermine our economy?

Meanwhile, many of us mourn the loss of our brave personnel, and wonder why the RPG was not spent on a better purpose.

Morning Ace. Always go for the humor side. Some of these guys are too easy. Too much going on in the world right now. I haven't gotten much home time. And, when I do get a few days home, we keep getting these nasty storms. Your going to have to do enough SWL for the both of us. BTW, have you heard anything on AFRTS/ 4319 upper? Been in and out of that area, I get nothing from them. Maybe off/ down? Finding no info on my end.

300K is closer to the real number.

There were also many local demonstrations because the train system was shut down. Most Israelis don't have cars, and many that do won't drive into Tel Aviv because of the traffic and parking.

The number used by the above web site to compare population sizes is wrong too. It only used the number of Jewish Israelis. There are over a million Arabs who are Israeli citizens too. They pay the same high prices everyone else pays for housing, cottage cheese, etc. They were out in force at the demonstration.

BTW, if you are Christian, you should take careful note that Israel is the only country in the area that has not been killing off Christians. They slowly have been driven out of Moslem countries (including the PA and Gaza), disenfranchised or outright killed.

In Israel they are full citizens and are thriving.

Sorry, Israel gets no welfare money from the US. The so called foreign aid has to be spent on obsolete weapons made in the US. It's really corporate welfare for US corporations, also called "pork". :-) you lost it in a Ponzi scheme, those people rarely get much money back.

Take the loss and put the people that run the Ponzi scheme in prison

The largest solar flare of Cycle 24 just took place at 08:05 UTC and it registered a whopping X6.9. The source was Sunspot 1263 which is nearing the Western Limb. Because of its location, any large explosions may not be fully earth directed. When watching new video images from the STEREO website, it appears the CME (although bright), is less intense than the one caused by the M9.3 flare from last week. A minor S1 Radiation Storm is in progress.

Stay tuned to SolarHam.com for the most up to date solar information on the internet.

Three trillion dollars in T-bills is no Ponzi scheme. That is what the people who want to steal it tell idiots like you, so when they do take it you won't get mad. I have made 6 figures in direct SSA payments, I do not expect to live long enough to collect it all.

Any European that came here prior to the 19th century had a slave or two. A lot of white Americans are descended from slaves, too. Australia ain't the only place where the riff-raff ended up.

If you stop taking in new suckers, and keep paying out benefits..... will it still be solvent?

If not, it's a Ponzi scheme. And we know this Ponzi scheme is paying out more than it's taking in.

Without new people putting their money in, so SS can be paid out to the older investors, the SS system will cut returns/benefits and eventually fail.

The collapsing economy will stop it.

The fact that more people collect than pay in is cataclysmic... Are you going to start a war to kill enough elderly Americans to get the ratio of payers to users more equal?

Have a donut hole between $107K and $500K. Above $500K 3% payroll tax resumes. Rich people are expected to contribute more because they benefit more. Nobody wants to live among desperate poor people; they smell bad and run down the property values.

Without cheap immigrant labor (or worse) there'd be no USA as we know it.

Yes, I knew that. Still, being so close to Cuba and extreme South Florida, WPHT is flooded out. Living in this area makes MWDX hard. That is why if I really want to listen to the station, I use my Wi-Fi based radio.

The Failure is that -if- US Social Security is Truly a Wealth

Measuring rpm, freezing motion, timing old ignitions and inducing epileptic like fits in people whose brain is wired that way. I've heard they are the latest party craze in Holland MI. "I've got six hands!",

The war will start in your back yard, the old and sick will run out of medicine and die..... that's the Socialist plan. Shave off a few million maybe 20 or 30 million will just die in an expedited way that "can't be helped" amidst all the chaos and confusion and violence and burning cities and lack of electricity and medical care. Obama is following the "plan".

Good luck, England is following the plan also. People will be afraid to venture out like they are in London..... Wisconsin is beginning the riots and the Socialist agitation and community activist violence, it's convenient that Wisconsin is where the Democrat-Socialists sent all their activists to stir up trouble for the Governor who cut UNION benefits. It's going to get worse....

The Socialists have a plan for you.

Try eBay. I found one that will cost you about US$6 (including shipping):
http://cgi.ebay.com/USB-RS232-Serial-9Pin-DB9-Adapter-w-Extension-Cable-/300585221620?pt=LH_DefaultDomain_0&hash=item45fc467df4

With a little persistence and parsimony, you can probably find it for even less.

It's not really lying if you believe what you say is true. Republicans live in a bubble of disinformation and voluntary ignorance. Not the same as lying.

Obama is killing the old and the sick and the young in Libya.... as he will do here on American soil. He'll do it and claim that he isn't doing it. He'll find a dupe or a fall guy or a "NATO" to hand it off to, and you'll see the old and the sick die from shortages and violence and chaos and you'll support Obama.

My reply to Bruce is:

I guess we'll just have to disagree.

I respect Bruce for his monitoring observations, and his help to me over the years, and I guess we'll have to leave our political views out of the mix.

NATO is NOT the U.N. military....

Obama has us paying for his personal war that he started with U.S. Missiles from the U.S. Navy. Obama then saw that the U.S. voters didn't want the war so Obama pawned it off on NATO which the U.S. pays mega dollars to fund.

Of course NATO didn't snub Obama who has power over NATO. NATO is a mercenary army, they work for those that pay them and WE PAY NATO MORE THAN ANYONE.

NATO is a rogue MERCENARY ARMY that's out of control.

Huh?

Sorry to disappoint you. If you think I am John Smith, you're waaaay off the beam.

However, I took your advice and looked at the headers.

I am NOT a net guru, so I really don't understand what I am reporting below in point 2. Maybe someone more expert in the ways of the web will chime in.

The only thing I see in common are that:

1) Apparently we both use "eternal-september" as a usenet provider. That would narrow it down to several tens of thousands of other eternal-september users.

2) In the header under "Organization", we are both listed as "A noiseless patient Spider".*

I truly have no clue what that means or how I got to be a part of that so-called "organization". Furthermore, I believe the other 13 or 14 people you think are John Smith "socks" may be in the same boat as I am. If that is what you are hanging your hat on, I respectfully suggest your "theory" is too simplistic and applies to numerous other people with no John Smith connection.

Sorry to rain on your parade, but I am definitely not John Smith nor one of his supposed socks. Nice try, but absolutely no cigar.

* a web search shows this to be a Walt Whitman poem published in 1867, so WTF????

That's why you need to get help. In reality, there's very little socialist anything going on from the white house. Maybe you don't really understand exactly what you're raving about? What plan do you believe is being followed?

I really am interested in the kookthought process.

Sorry slick, but a UN resolution is meaningless on going to war, all power to declare war is constitutionally mandated to the Congress, The only way it can be changed is to change the constitution, the power can NOT be given to the UN or the President or NATO without an amendment to the constitution.

No army until congress says so and pays for it.

You Democrat-Socialists want to complain about military costs, it was Democrats that voted to pay for Bush's wars..... They even gave Bush the constitutional power to go fight. Obama was never given the power to go to war or to use NATO to go to war.

Now tell us where the Obama power came from to launch missiles at Libya and to allow our military, be they NATO or NOT, to bomb or watch or target or in any way molest Libya? Libya had NOT threatened our security in any way. This was an act of agression and not using the military as defence as the constitution says the military is for "defence".

Egypt,Sumer etc . all had calendars and sundials . Nothing unusual here ; standard time was imperative/mandatory/necessary for navigational purposes --hence England and GMT . BTW, what type of clocks are good enough for space travel ?

Standard time was invented for railroads, celestial navigation only requires GMT, as you can guess your longitude by where the sun is in relation to where it would be if you were at the prime meridian (GMT).

You can guess your latitude by where the sun is in relation to where it would be at the equator, e.g. noon would be directly overhead.

If I wasn't so lazy I would stay up late and DX but I do the stocks at you can get a nice cesium clock that'll fit in a couple rack spaces these days. I have a wild quartz clock that has kept perfect time for 23 years. It has a Westminster chime that synchronizes perfectly with the Beeb's Five Pips. My Casio goes beepbeep right in the middle.

So I'm just curious - what do we object to here? The "Republicans are liars" thing, which is arguably true, or the "inbreeding" thing, which is obviously a crude joke? I don't understand why the knee-jerk conservatives can make one disgraceful comment about liberals after another, including veiled threats to kill them, and when a liberal does it he gets picked on by everyone? The hypocrisy is so thick you can cut with a jackhammer.

If there is bitterness, it is because the problem of human-forced climate change has been KNOWN for decades by scientists across the political spectrum, before Al Gore, even before you or I were born, and there wasn't any frigging serious controversy about the ethics or basic science of it until the oil companies caught wind of it and started pumping $billions into propaganda campaigns against honest, intelligent scientists - and showing their absolute lust for greed and total contempt for humanity, the natural world and all of its inhabitants. When we were becoming equipped to actually handle the problem, the demagogues decided their profits were more important than the planet, and came out with all the BS. On this matter, yes, I am bitter.

Your statistics are off. Only 97 percent of politicians are liars. The problem is they've been doing it so long they don't even realize they're doing it. Some lies span generations.

28 percent are closet pedophiles and 65 percent have re-occurring homosexual fantasies. That last number is far less than the perversion numbers in Holland, MI., where, admittedly, the numbers are skewed because of ONE ex Navy reprobate doing WAY more than his share.

Let's not get started on the infidelities and various forms of drug addiction being practiced by the so called servants of the people.

Politicians are scum. Those in power at the time are bigger scum. It's a matter of opportunity.

Mike Myers says that silliness is a State of Grace.

One of the reasons so many people are so angry and tense is that they've lost their silly.

As I said before, Al Gore is irrelevant to the actual issue. He is only a messenger. To blithely discredit 150 years of long and thoughtful research by physicists, meterologists, climatologists, oceanographers, mathematicians and astronomers, peer review after peer review of every single hypothesis vetted to the nth degree, and a science which freely admits that it still must answer some of the more intractable questions to provide a complete picture - as every true science does, every time - because you don't like the messenger - is just ugly, unscientific politics. To do it because of greedy, narcissistic motives is reprehensible and immoral.

Science has given us EVERY good thing we have beyond basic food, water and land. We love our PCs and radios and TVs and transportation and modern medicine and thank science for it, and rightfully so. However, science is not always the bearer of benign or conveniently profitable news. Sometimes it brings us bad news, sometimes news that even challenges the existing power structure. Galileo and Darwin challenged the church (and some willful people, to this day, still disagree with both of these guys) - but their basic science is sound, as is all true science, and has eventually won the day. Like the science of Galileo and Darwin, the science of human-induced climate change challenges the existing power structrure - nowadays, concentrated wealth like the Koch Brothers and big oil/coal - and consequently their propaganda machines are working in overtime to preserve their power. As a result, Al Gore is bad and = climate change science, and no-nothing reporters at Faux and Drudge are the experts after spending zero years in actual research.

History repeats itself, and we have fallen into the same old trap of ignorance and rebellion against inconvenience at the behest of the powerful. The difference, this time, is that the fate of many forms of life on the planet, as well as the security and well-being of billions of people, hang in the balance.

Ignore Al Gore if you don't like him. He's just a politician. But the science was, and is, conducted as it should be, and like all true science that takes time and effort, is gradually yielding the correct answer. We ridicule and ignore it at our own peril.

This is amazing on many levels - (1) spotted 750 light years away (2) only 3 million miles from its parent star/sun (3) cooked to roasting temps and yet (4) reflects only <1% of the sunlight falling upon it. On top of that, it glows dimly red from it's own heat. Truly alien and astonishing. I love astronomy! (I wonder if science deniers will attack this - no, probably not - this data won't cost them anything).

Bitter maybe, but no less correct. You literally don't what the hell

you're talking about, wallow in joyful self-imposed ignorance, and have not a single credential to your name. All you know is what the oil propaganda machine tells you. Educate yourself, or STFU.

LOL!! Spoken like the liberal shill you are.

You made my point perfectly. Nothing between the ears. You also cannot read or understand the written word.

Get literate. Get educated. Then, and only then, will we have a common basis for discussion. Until then, cya.

::::remaining content stipulated::::

Algore IS irrelevant. My point being that the words were not Roy's. They were, in fact, Algore's. We may take solace in the fact, that one blind squirrel has found his nuts, today.

More to the point...The science is not settled. As evidenced by the number of qualified physicists, meteorologists and climatologists that have taken opposition. And while the science to which you refer is, in fact, peer reviewed, in the scientific community dissent against a concensus is an essential part of the scientific process. Where there is no debate, there can be, ultimately, no truth. Only politics. What's interesting, and what many on The Other Side are so enraged about, is that the most vocal about this matter refuse to debate it at all.

Gore, for instance, will not be on any program with any other guest who may speak. He will have the questions put to him vetted before he agrees to appear. He will not answer questions that do not presuppose his position is correct and absolute. (I speak with some first hand experience with this, as a producer of radio interview programs while I was at CBS.) In fact, recently, in Chicago, he was scheduled for a media tour, all the TV chat shows, all the radio stations. The day he was in town, the scandal broke about the e-mails from the University of East Anglia. All his appearances were summarily cancelled, and he left town under cover, so as not to have to face questions.

Gore is only, as you say, a politician. And not a very good one at that. But he is hardly alone in this. Else, why have there been no open debates on this issue. There is only assertion and denial of opposition. But there are no questions answered, no evidence challenged.

That's not science, Bruce. That's politics.

History has presented other examples, look at Lister, reviled for his position that contagion may be spread doctor to patient through contaminated hands. Virtually, the entire medical community, scientists...chemists, physicians, surgeons, researchers...all condemned Lister for his single voice against the concensus. And yet, he was right. Proven so in the fullness of time.

After the First World War and through the Second, science advocated eugenics as a true and viable scientific solution to man's ills. Dissent was fiercely suppressed in some circles. Often with execution a result. Now widely discredited on scientific grounds, only a few holdouts still assert eugenics as a means to a societal end. William Shockley was among them. In the fullness of time, and debate, did the truth emerge through the politics.

And, as you correctly point out, that a true science must admit it's incomplete understanding, as is the case in the Climate Change debate, and answer the more intractable questions in order to complete its understanding. In which case, dissent is also part of the scientific process.

Taken in these lights, shooting the messenger, either messenger, is reprehensible and immoral. Which puts the abject dismissal of dissent in the same category as those who deny the concensus themselves.

Put that another way, there must be debate for the truth to ultimately emerge. To dismiss, condemn, or silence either side is to deny the emergence of the truth through scientific processes.

The Man Made Climate Change advocates, including Gore (yes, a politician,) have joined many sitting politicians in state and federal legislative bodies in calling for the silencing through revocation of grant, through revocation of certification, through termination of employment of anyone not supporting the Man Made Climate Change agenda. Read Barbara Boxer's statements on the subject. These individuals, as many of this body of advocacy, have been guilty of the kind of ugly, unscientific politics you yourself have here decried.

The truth will be known in the fullness of time. Silencing either side, shooting either messenger will only support the emergent politics. It will not support the emergent truth.

I don't care about Al Gore. Al Gore is STILL irrelevant.

Nobody proposes to silence either messenger. Let he who has the evidence present it. I have not see any new evidence to the contrary in awhile - just the same old hackneyed arguments that keep getting dredged up, plus flash-in-the-pan exclamation points like that one about satellite data from a couple weeks ago. They are either already accounted for or are being worked on. If the basic theory needs adjustment, however big that may be, it gets done - no real scientist wants to see it done wrong - that makes no sense. Meanwhile, the real scientific community has been near consensus on this matter since before Al Gore Jr. was even a known name. The fullness of time, as I have explained before, is already largely passed and the big questions have been essentially answered. I knew this already 35 years ago, when only scietists were still questioning the details, rather than every screwball who had a political opinion.

Stop making excuses for the bozos and the coropration for whom this is an inconvenience. More important things than money are at stake.

Speak for yourself. There is no reason I can see to believe that this is true for the general population. When life crushes you, it crushes you.

Except he draws examples that aren't relevant and ignores (again) the

You are an idiot. Again. Your blathering that "science is religion" does not make it so, and only undescores your complete misunderstanding of what science and the scientific process is.

Religion is the belief in something without the tiniest shred of evidence. It often equals poltiics, especially these days.

Science is quite the opposite - science is skepticism until overwhelming evidence is in. Learn the difference. Or not - continue to be an ignorant idiot, I don't care.

I said nothing about liberals here - you are putting words in my mouth. Science is not liberal or conservative - it is only objective. Liberals and conservatives used to know that (except when the church told them not to - it's only when the prevailing power structure is challenged that science is politicized, and even then, the real scientists eschew the crap).

My logic is nearly perfect, and only falters when I do not have facts - in which case I admit I do not have the facts. Logic is not built on presuppositions or bad analogies, or even on opinions. Yours is likely nonexistent, since facts appear to mean nothing to you.

Again, read Barbara Boxer's comment on the subject. Silencing opposition is precisely what she proposed. And being an active officer in the US Government, that raises some very serious 1st Amendment issues. And yet, she has proposed some pretty significant legislative motion to specifically silence those who don't sign on to the agenda.

This is contrary to scientific discourse, debate and process.

State of mind is choice. State of grace is a gift that may or may not be actualized. But it is at the choice.

You know, when I was laying in the street, in '86, bleeding to such an extent that the end of my leg was foaming, and the blood running into the storm sewer, I had about 3 minutes to live. I still didn't lose my sense of humor, dark as it was. And it helped me stay calm until the ambulance arrived.

Humor is an essential part of life. No more important than during tough times. It's essential to survival.

And those whom Life has crushed, are no less able to adopt the Silly state of grace, than anyone else in the population.

And, often, they do.

Nor did I. That's why I said 'and often,' and, 'and there are those who,' Recognizing some do, some don't.

The important point being that it can be done, and is.

OK, I give up. All I find are some comments about national security and how the military needs to be prepared. Please provide a link. Make sure there are contextual quotes please - not some Fox News digestion.

Anyway, it is still irrelevant - and by the way, like I said, until the oil companies got involved, none of those so-called "qualified experts" came out of the woodwork and said it was a hoax. Many scientists, both ostensibly liberal and conservative, were beginning to reach consensus. It was the alarms at the oil companies that put their shills on the payroll to say anything they could...and virtually everything they have said has now been number crunched to death. We don't need to hear the same tired crap over and over again endlessly for a whole new audience of minions to get riled about. Honest skeptics are still welcome in the scientific debate, and honest opposing evidence is still taken very seriously.

After all this is done, I refuse to talk about anything else except the honest science...because none of the rest of this gibberish matters, and is a waste of time.

Well, that's a bit of a red herring. The oil companies have been under fire since the days of John D. There's never been a time that they've not been under fire. Simply gainsaying the oil companies are to blame is scientifically disingenous.

In fact, the opposition experts came out before the oil companies got involved in the debate.

I'm no fan of the oil companies. In fact, if you read the story of the Ethyl Corporation, you'll see how bad a corporate citizen can be. And Ethyl was co formed by DuPont (interesting irony there) Standard Oil, and GM, because John D. wasn't willing to surrender 10% of the nations' gas tank to a non-petroleum product like ethanol. (Ethanol was known as far back as the Model T to be an effective antiknock additive>) It's incomprehensible that such a company could exist from the 30's to the present. But they do.

But not everyone who speaks out on the issue of climate change is an oil company shill.

Several have been volcanic geoligists. Some have been meteorologists. Others have been academics and researchers who've faced censure, and withdrawal of funding for their positions in an attempt to intimidate opposition. Those funded by Big Oil would face no such fears.

And that, though you are correct, there is more at stake than money, that's what it comes down to.

Underscoring, again, that this issue is more about the politics than science.

Many

It's been suggested that the fight over man made global climate change isn't really about whether or not CO2 causes it. The fight, at least by one side, is actually about continuing the present, increasing pollution unabated.

Anywhere there is CO2, there are carcinogenic byproducts. The industrialists seem to be trying to equate a cleaner environment with raving lunatic communism. Controlling emissions cuts into the bottom line. Win the CO2 fight and you win the pollution right.

CO2 is a very convenient way to make people forget about the toxic crap that accompanies it. The toxic stuff kills people a lot faster. It's best not to mention it.

Me? I believe all environmental degradation and pollution is due to corrupt politicians.

Isn't "the truth" already known?

FACT (truth): Carbon dioxide IS a greenhouse gas.

FACT (truth): We ARE putting greater and greater amounts of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, especially with India and China coming on line with millions more cars and an insatiable demand for more and more electricity.

Could someone out there in Net Land please explain why all this extra carbon dioxide (remember, a greenhouse gas) won't have an effect on the climate?

Strange article. It says physicists have likely made an important absolutely nothing about how it was made.

Another moron from inside the Bubble. Al Gore is a fine, articulate gentleman. For this reason the mainstream press is relentless in their attempts to besmirch him. The Fascistas at Koch Industries and ExxonMobil just can't stand to see a fellow oil man who isn't a massive pig like they are.

- You are an idiot. Again.
- Your blathering that "science is religion"

- does not make it so, and only undescores
- your complete misunderstanding of what science
- and the scientific process is.
- Religion is the belief in something without

- equals poltiics, especially these days.
- Science is quite the opposite - science
- is skepticism until overwhelming evidence
- is in. Learn the difference.

I noticed one of the super cool SMC HF-150s with the black exterior on QRZ.com today:

http://forums.qrz.com/showthread.php?308421-Smc-(lowes)-hf-150-receiver

I have zero connection with this add or this seller.

I'll say this much: I'd much rather buy this radio than waste my money on some piece of junk from Eton or whoever else is selling radios these days.

He offsets his carbon output with credits, traded on the open market, in pure capitalist fashion. Carbon taxes are an established procedure for influencing energy use and planning. I don't condone ethanol subsidies

I'm surprised you get much DX in mid afternoon local time -> there's nothing on the air here at that time. A good time here is early evening from about1400z to 1800z, then all the major broadcasters come in here in English and lots of ham traffic as well. As you say it's interesting to hear different countries slant on the news.
I'm up early every morn at 0400z for the MW & LW DX

In the early afternoon I'm having my old mans snooze.

Ohah! stocks at 9.30 is indeed enough to make you cry, but take heart it always bounces back eventually. Anyway silly man you should have been in GOLD!

Free software
Software under any one version of the GNU GPL license falls within a somewhat similar category and is referred to as free software. As stressed by the FSF (Free Software Foundation), free in this context goes beyond the "no payment" concept - it's about the freedom to use, share, study and modify a piece of software. For this to be possible, the source code for that software must be made freely available, which also applies to modified and shared (distributed) versions.

It's worth noting that the GPL clearly states that entities that modify or distribute original or derivate software may charge any amount of money for this service. However, this rarely happens and almost every product licensed under the GPL can be obtained without paying any kind of fee.

free software may be used at no cost for both personal and commercial purposes. However, if a person or company creates a derived software product by modifying the original source code and wishes to distribute the result, it must be done under the same free software terms, including the source code modifications.

Programs licensed under this model qualify for the Softpedia "100% Free" award.

During the sixties the fort was home to three offshore 'pirate' radio stations: Radio Invicta, King Radio and finally Radio 390.

All offshore radio stations were eventually closed in 1967 when the UK changed the law with regard to radio broadcasting.

That is interesting. Doesn't the earth reflect around 10 to 20% of the sunlight falling on it? I wonder what the surface of this planet is like for it to reflect so little light. Of course it might just look like a black cinder, being so close to its sun!

Of the three locations, yes, two are relatively RF free. One is not.
And for that one, less antenna is good.

To be clear, this isn't a Ten-Tec, but performance doesn't REQUIRE a preselector, if you play your antennae correctly, and your earth ground is good.

Of the rigs I use regularly, HF-150 (and in the interest of full disclosure, I have the SMC model) sees as much action as the Drake.

And it goes with me every time I go to the woods.

It's a hifi AM tuner. It is not a DX monster or a Ute receiver. It has very nice synchronous detection but growls on occassion. I have the IF-150 232 to 3.5mm interface, as well as the KP-150. I even have the DOS floppy somewhere. I have never lived far enough from the city to not need a preselector to keep local MW stations from ghosting into other bands. Some people use a MW bandstop filter, but then they can't hear WLS! I use an MFJ-956.

Still easily outperformed by today's black box radios with direct

Oliver North ADMITTED everything during immunized testimony. Where does this "framed" shit come from.

The nuns and priests I'm thinking of were 11 months after Reagan. There are thousands of "disappeared" union organizers, educators, etc.

I knew some of the actors from Texas.

Another irrelevant and distorted "so what" statistic. We need to spend Asians wear dust masks because of the "yellow wind." Windstorms whip up fine sand from the Gobi desert and winds aloft carry it all across China, Korea, Japan and parts of Siberia and even sometimes to the west coast of the US. Nasty stuff, that.. even the military won't let the troops work when it's at its worst.

It definitely needs one here, unless you want to use a really short hunk of wire as an antenna. My friend brought his over and not only was the nearby AM station getting into it, but another one that is across town was audible at many places on the dial. Even the junkiest of my preselectors (a homebrewed one I bought at a hamfest) solved all it's problems.

Propagation Forecast Bulletin 32 ARLP032
SB PROP ARL ARLP032
ARLP032 Propagation de K7RA

Average daily sunspot numbers declined over 24 points to 75.1 this week, and average daily solar flux was down over 12 points to 104.3. Big events this week were solar flares, with a substantial geomagnetic upset on Friday and Saturday, August 5 and 6, when the planetary A index was 49 and 31. The largest solar flare of the current sunspot cycle, an X7 flare, occurred at 0805z on August 9, emerging from sunspot group 1263. This does not appear to be earth-directed.

The latest forecast from NOAA has solar flux at 85 on August 12-13, at 90 on August 14-16, 95 on August 17-18, 98 on August 19-20, 100 on August 21, then 105 on August 22-30. Planetary A index is expected to be 5 on August 12-14, then 15, 18, 12, 5, 8, 5, 12 and 8 on August 15-22, 5 on August 23-25, and 15, 10, 8, 5 and 5 on August 26-30.

Reviewing recent sunspot activity, on August 4 there were four sunspot groups visible, 1260, 1261, 1263 and 1266. Total area covered by sunspots was 1380 millionths of a solar hemisphere, the largest coverage since March 8, 2011.

On August 5 new sunspot group 1267 appeared, and on August 6 groups 1260 and 1266 disappeared, and new group 1268 arrived. 1268 disappeared and 1266 reappeared on August 7, and on August 8, 1261 was gone and 1268 emerged again. 1268 then vanished again on August 9. On August 10 sunspot group 1267 was gone, and 1268 came back. On August 11 sunspot group 1263 was gone, and new groups 1269 and 1270 appeared.

Kent Doucey, N0IRM of Galena, Missouri was on 20 meter SSB on August 3, and at 0239z worked Victor, E51CG on Rarotonga. Signals were strong, so they switched to 10 meters and connected again, this time with weaker but quite readable signals, at a distance of about 5,900 miles. If you look up both of these stations at QRZ.com, you'll see some nice photos of their antennas.

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia wrote on August 6: "We had some nice sporadic E on Wednesday the August 3 evening here with 6M open to W9/0. I very briefly worked WA2BEV in Butler, PA on 10M only about 190 miles away via Es and logged a couple of MI stations there, possibly the result of the flares. Conditions on the 11th (this is confusing, as the email was sent August 6) were decent with very good prop to VK and LP into ZS on 20M around 12Z. I then went up to 15 to find ST0R on CW about S4 here and not workable thru the EU/JA pile up (in 15 minutes they worked no NA stations). Returning after 15Z, I luckily found their QSX frequency and was the next QSO with ST0R signal up to about S6. I then tried 12M and worked PA1CC about S5 and CS2W on CW. A listen on 10M yielded hearing an I-ZERO beacon an hearing IW0 working someone not audible, but CQs yielded no QSOs. Signals on 15M in the 15Z hour were good up to LY and SM, but nothing heard from Russia.

Regarding W7FA, Vince's comments about solar flare/storm enhancement of signals, this is definitely true even sometimes over polar paths. But another factor, time of day, would explain a big difference in signal strength; his SSB QSO with ST0R in the 23Z hour was at a time when signals would be expected to be much weaker than approaching west coast sunset around 02Z".

Robert Elek, W3HKK of Johnstown, Ohio is excited about six meters. He sent this: "HUGE 6m Es opening from central Ohio to New England and the Maritimes this Sunday morning (August 7) around noon, with signals the strongest I've heard them all season. Mick, W1JJ with his box 9 el Yagis on a cell phone tower took my S-meter to unparalleled heights ... 40 dB over! And VE1SKY, Roger, and I had what seemed like a one hour arm chair rag chew on a variety of topics, while the S meter rolled between 20 over and S7. Lots more folks getting into MS with the WSJT software, as a way to use 6m in the 'off-season.' Then worked a couple of 59+ sigs from the NYC area which is very short Es, indicative of intense sporadic E ionization. I even heard stations to my west while beaming ENE. As I rotated the 5 el Yagi west they dropped out, so I was hearing S3-4 sigs from behind me also bouncing off the same sporadic E cloud (backscatter) that was propagating sigs so well from New England. Incredible!

Two days earlier, on Friday night between 6-7:30 pm, I made my first AU(aurora) QSO ever on 6m, and then 23 more, into MI, ON, WI, MN, IL, IN, IA, PA, MD, VA, KY, TN, MD and OH. Strangest of all the buzz-saw sounding CW notes was KA1VHF, Steve, located a mere 20 mi west of me. We've worked a few times but this was the first time via AU! Amazing to hear a local coming in via AU!

And two days before that, on Wed around 1430z I added G8BCG and G4RRA plus CU2JT to the grid square collection for this season.

And the previous Sunday night I even checked into the LoneStar Net in TX, with NC W5HNK and the boys all with 5-9 sigs rag chewing via their groundwave but also picking up check ins from Ohio!

So what a week it was! DX, Es the loudest of the season, and AU! 6m ain't dead yet!"

Thanks, Robert!

That makes no sense. The 5% difference is obviously where the real radio happens. The Lowe is a pain to tune. It has no noise blanker. No S-Meter. And they all turn purple eventually.

There are no "marketers" where I shop. I buy from other hobbyists. What you are saying is that a Mustang and a Cobra are basically the same car?

What I'm saying is what I've already said: that with an HF-150 you'll hear 95% of what you'll hear on a much more expensive radio. Am I saying they're the same radio? No, because one will on rare occasions allow you to hear things that other won't and it will cost you much, much more money.

Liberty Net: August 6, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/08/liberty-net-august-6-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THIS ARCHIVE of Liberty Net discussions is not only a resource for us, as we try to make sense of our world despite the purposeful distortions of the mass media, but it is also a record of individual lives and thoughts ï¿½ and of history in the making. This week there were attempts (which met with almost no success) to jam the Liberty Net, but such immoral and illegal acts do little more than show the anti-free-speech mentality of those responsible.

Hereï¿½s a small sampling of opinions and ideas from the most recent session of amateur radioï¿½s longest-running and most interesting discussion net:

ï¿½ Watch out for some fireworks in the financial markets: As the rating of the regimeï¿½s debt tumbles, interest rates may be forced upward ï¿½ and when that happens, debt service payments will multiply gigantically, and instantly. (20 minutes)

ï¿½ The Black gang attacks now called ï¿½flash mobsï¿½ are not new, though they are increasing rapidly. Two decades ago, such feral behavior was called ï¿½wilding.ï¿½ From 2002 to 2008 there were 13 documented flash mob attacks, but there have been over 90 since then. Though the attacks are almost exclusively Black on White, the controlled mass media are very reluctant to mention race. (27 minutes)

ï¿½ Soon, when ï¿½financial reformsï¿½ give more power than ever to the banks, expect American citizens to literally become indentured servants of the international bankers. (41 minutes)

ï¿½ Are the above-mentioned Black flash mobs, organized by social media, always spontaneous? Or are they sometimes being used as the modern equivalent of Maoï¿½s Red Guards? Will they be out in force to intimidate White voters on election day next year? (43 minutes)

ï¿½ When military men join up, they swear an oath to oppose all enemies of the Constitution, foreign and domestic, by force of arms if necessary. Well, whatï¿½s stopping them? (59 minutes)

ï¿½ Since the government vultures and Wall Street vultures have been doing everything they can to drive down the real price of single-family homes, could it be that someone is positioning himself to grab those homes on the cheap as Americans are forced out of them? (1 hour 45 minutes)

ï¿½ When the governmentï¿½s ï¿½recoveryï¿½ program consists mainly of literally giving trillions of dollars to the banks, how can there be any remaining doubt about who actually owns the illegal regime in Washington? (2 hours 2 minutes)

ï¿½ We all know that insider trading is supposed to be illegal. But did you know that Congressmen exempted themselves from those rules ï¿½ and that they definitely know in advance where huge no-bid military contracts are going to be placed, in plenty of time to place big bets on them in the stock market? (2 hours 11 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And Al, N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time. The frequency varies to avoid interference, but lately has been between 20 and 40 kHz above 3950 LSB.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 37th year.

Sometimes I think people argue just because they have a kind of mental defect.

"Chief design consultant, John Thorpe, went on to consult for AOR in Derbyshire who produce his high specification design, the AR7030 HF communications receiver. The AR7030 bears more than a passing resemblance to some of the receivers that John Thorpe previously designed at Lowe Electronics and had production of radios continued at Lowe there is no doubt that the 7030 design would have been manufactured by Lowe!"

The ļæ½social justiceļæ½ movement in Israel started in mid-July with a tent-city in Tel-Aviv, where people complained about the all too high housing costs. After four consecutive weekends of protests, the publicļæ½s rage has extended to other economic issues, including the cost of food, petrol and education.

The previous weekend Israel saw the largest ever protest in its history when more than 300,000 people turned out to demand urgent reforms, with Tel Aviv gathering a 250,000 strong demonstration. Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had to call a committee to address the protestersļæ½ demands.

I have a recent Subaru that I maintain myself. I have a Tacoma with 185,000 miles on it. It needs bushings. Should probably get the shocks changed at the same time; will scour sports section for coupons.

Just curious; what supports your 43' vertical wire? Pole, tree, helium balloon, or ... ?

Possibly you are overlooking the fact that "they done made them so fancy" that a 150,000 or 200,000 mile life is not uncommon, a feat rarely matched by the old beaters. Generally speaking, the new cars don't need a shade tree mechanic.

Ain't it the truth? Most of them look like eggs on wheels with the same style headlights and tail lights. I love watching classic car auctions on TV. There were great looking cars in the 50's, 60's, and 70's. Sadly, today they sacrifice style and class for aerodynamics.

I once took an AR7030 for a test drive at Universal Radio. Performance was excellent but the ergonomics drove me crazy. The cabinet was OK but maybe not heavy enough.

There was another model (7070) being developed in the last 2 years or so . Zycomm is involved this time, since AOR UK not around any longer as far as I know. 10 pre-production units will be made in September.The price? Higher than the 7030 ,with the US$ losing it's ground lately...

That cabinet is aluminum. The threading is made by the screws (!) .
Top cover screws and bottom cover screws are not same(they have different heads) . People paid good money for these little wonder-boxes . " Dave's Radio Reviews " is a great place to find out just how 'reliable' AR7030 was . . .

The interface is different, that's for sure. But you get used to it. I can step between the Drake and the 7030 and barely notice the difference, anymore. It's adaptive. The functions you use most often are highest on the tree. So, the more you use it, not only do you get used to it, but the fewer steps you need to take to get things done.

You say "government propaganda" like it's the only one. Name some media that isn't government propaganda.

The point is they got caught. I don't care who tells me. I have 3 news

I do my own tuneups, brakes, body maintenance, etc. There's not much else to do on a 100% made in Japan car. I will need to split the engine in 2 at 100K to replace the timing belts and water pump. But that's the curse of getting 175 HP out of a motor the size of a carryon bag.

In December of 2010, I had to rebuild the 4 barrel Thermo-Quad carburetor in my 1983 Dodge van.That 4 barrel MOFO carburetor was a real B!tch to get it right.My 1978 Dodge van has a simple easy to rebuild 2 barrel carburetor.Both vans have 318 cubic inches engines.Someday I am going to check the auto junkyards around here for an intake manifold that uses a 2 barrel carburetor and I will put that manifold on my 1983 Dodge van.I already have two 2 barrel carburetors, plus the one on my 1978 Dodge van.I don't like 4 barrel carburetors.I don't like fuel injection either.I am too old a dog to learn any new tricks.

Qatar isn't like that, as far as I know. Women can vote and wear skirts on TV. Al Jazeera is officially banned in most places like you describe. They are a force for democritization. George Bush set back democritization 20 years when he attacked Iraq like a crazy person.

Fascism is a form of government which centers all power [House, Senate and Judiciary] in a single party [Liberal Fascist JackAss Democrats] headed by an absolute dictater [0baMa0 Tse Dung].

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/Communist is a Fascist according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.
Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010 complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

The immediate response of liberals such as Chris Matthews
http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent.
Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist

authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Fascism is a form of government which centers all power [House, Senate

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Anyone who refutes a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/
Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13 actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

Anyone who is NOT a public Union/Liberal/Progressive/Socialist/

Communist is a moron according to Useful Liberal JackAss Idiots.

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13
actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - http://mises.org/midroad.asp

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

As socialistworker.org admits, http://socialistworker.org/2003-2/471/471_09_Fascism.shtml
the left routinely applies the term "fascist" to any Republican political leader. In Britain The Guardian, BBC, and other liberal media pounced on purported links between the Bush family and corporations that had dealings with Nazi Germany. The fact that Prescott Bush, George W. Bush's grandfather, was a "director and shareholder" with companies that had indirect financial dealings with Germany in the 1930s would hardly seem damning, however. Much the same could be said for many other affluent individuals in America or Britain at the time. Every American today with mutual fund holdings is invested, at least indirectly, in Hugo Chavez's Venezuela. Does that make them Marxist revolutionaries?

Talk of Hitler became a lot more common during the Bush years, when it was accepted wisdom on the left that George Bush was worse than Hitler. Then there was Nancy Pelosi, who spent weeks back in 2010
complaining of the Tea Party's so-called "swastika signs" -- signs that did not signal an alliance with fascism but opposition to it.
Pelosi was hardly alone in accusing the Tea Party of fascism. Marc Rubin, writing for examiner.com, referred to Tea Party members as
"text book fascists." He went on to pin the neo-fascist label on Tom Tancredo, presumably because of Tancredo's concerns over illegal immigration. If those concerns make Tancredo a fascist, they would make the majority of Americans who share those concerns fascists as well. But that's pretty much how the left sees America.

http://www.mrc.org/biasalert/2011/20110412110017.aspx to the Ryan
"Path to Prosperity" was to characterize it as a killer not just of babies and old people but of "half the people who watch this show."
This attempt to portray the GOP plan as genocidal is just another example of the fascist rhetoric. It appears that Matthews is attempting to portray the Ryan plan as some sort of Final Solution.

It's not just loose cannons on MSNBC who resort to fascist innuendo.
Obama's speechwriters are good at crafting sinister suggestions even without using the "F" word. Obama's budget speech of April 13
actually set the tone for the current debate. With Rep. Ryan sitting on the front row, Obama lectured his audience that the GOP plan would

kick "someone's grandparents" out of nursing homes and cause children with autism and Down's syndrome to "fend for themselves." It is well known that Hitler sent legions of the disabled to concentration camps to be gassed, but the suggestion that a plan to actually save Medicare and Medicaid resembles the Holocaust, if that is what Obama intended, is repellent. It was one more proof, as if we needed any more, of a fatal weakness in the character of this President. He is a man whose entire existence is devoted to gutter politics. For such a man, statesmanship and dignified leadership are inconceivable.

The plan truth is that America can no longer afford this sort of reckless partisanship on the part of the chief executive. The fact that Obama disagrees with Rep. Ryan's budget plan does not justify accusations of killing sick children or tossing old folks out on the street. That kind of rhetoric may pass for wit in the sixth grade, but it is juvenile coming from the President.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled,

and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent.
Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

NAZI Origins of LIBERAL FASCISTS Global Warming - While this may sound odd to many who have bought into the Marxian propaganda over the years that the Nazis were right wing capitalistic extremists, Greens who signed up for the Nazi Party were actually very typical of the day. Between 60% and 70% of the German Greens were NAZI Party members, compared to only 10% of the population at large.

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!”

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term “liberalism” (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning “pertaining to a free man”) first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to “liberal” causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither “liberal” nor “progressive,” but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

http://www.foxnews.com/us/2011/08/13/san-francisco-transit-blocks-cellphones-to-hinder-protest/?intcmp=obnetwork

An illegal, Orwellian violation of free-speech rights? Or just a smart tactic to protect train passengers from rowdy would-be demonstrators during a busy evening commute?

The question resonated Saturday in San Francisco and beyond as details emerged of Bay Area Rapid Transit officials' decision to cut off underground cellphone service for a few hours at several stations Thursday. Commuters at stations from downtown to near the city's main airport were affected as BART officials sought to tactically thwart a planned protest over the recent fatal shooting of a 45-year-old man by transit police.

Two days later, the move had civil rights and legal experts questioning the agency's move, and drew backlash from one transit board member who was taken aback by the decision.

"I'm just shocked that they didn't think about the implications of this. We really don't have the right to be this type of censor," said Lynette Sweet, who serves on BART's board of directors. "In my opinion, we've let the actions of a few people affect everybody. And that's not fair."

Similar questions of censorship have arisen in recent days as Britain's government put the idea of curbing social media services on the table in response to several nights of widespread looting and violence in London and other English cities. Police claim that young criminals used Twitter and Blackberry instant messages to coordinate looting sprees in riots.

Prime Minister David Cameron said that the government, spy agencies and the communications industry are looking at whether there should be limits on the use of social media sites like Twitter and Facebook or services like BlackBerry Messenger to spread disorder. The suggestions have met with outrage -- with some critics comparing Cameron to the despots ousted during the Arab Spring.

In the San Francisco instance, Sweet said BART board members were told by the agency of its decision during the closed portion of its meeting Thursday afternoon, less than three hours before the protest was scheduled to start.

"It was almost like an afterthought," Sweet told The Associated Press. "This is a land of free speech and for us to think we can do that shows we've grown well beyond the business of what we're supposed to be doing and that's providing transportation. Not censorship."

But there are nuances to consider, including under what conditions, if any, an agency like BART can act to deny the public access to a form of communication -- and essentially decide that a perceived threat to public safety trumps free speech.

These situations are largely new ones, of course. A couple of decades ago, during the fax-machine and pay-phone era, the notion of people organizing mass gatherings in real time on wireless devices would have been fantasy.

BART Deputy Police Chief Benson Fairow said the issue boiled down to the public's well-being.

"It wasn't a decision made lightly. This wasn't about free speech. It was about safety," Fairow told KTVU-TV on Friday.

BART spokesman Jim Allison maintained that the cellphone disruptions were legal as the agency owns the property and infrastructure. He added while they didn't need the permission of cellphone carriers to temporarily cut service, they notified them as a courtesy.

The decision was made after agency officials saw details about the protest on an organizer's website. He said the agency had extra staff and officers aboard trains during that time for anybody who wanted to report an emergency, as well as courtesy phones on station platforms.

"I think the entire argument is that some people think it created an unsafe situation is faulty logic," Allison said. "BART had operated for 35 years without cellphone service and no one ever suggested back then that a lack of it made it difficult to report emergencies and we had the same infrastructure in place."

But as in London, BART's tactic drew immediate comparisons to authoritarianism, including acts by the former president of Egypt to squelch protests demanding an end to his rule. Authorities there cut Internet and cellphone services in the country for days earlier this year. He left office shortly thereafter.

"BART officials are showing themselves to be of a mind with the former president of Egypt, Hosni Mubarak," the Electronic Frontier Foundation said on its website. Echoing that comparison, vigorous weekend discussion on Twitter was labeled with the hashtag "muBARTek."

Aaron Caplan, a professor at Loyola Law School in Los Angeles who specializes in free-speech issues, was equally critical, saying BART clearly violated the rights of demonstrators and other passengers.

"We can arrest and prosecute people for the crimes they commit," he said. "You are not allowed to shut down people's cellphones and prevent them from speaking because you think they might commit a crime in the future."

Michael Risher, the American Civil Liberty Union's Northern California staff attorney, echoed the sentiment in a blog: "The government shouldn't be in the business of cutting off the free flow of information. Shutting down access to mobile phones is the wrong response to political protests, whether it's halfway around the world or right here in San Francisco."

On Saturday at the station where cell phone service was disrupted, passenger Phil Eager, 44, shared the opinion that BART's approach seemed extreme.

"It struck me as pretty strange and kind of extreme," said Eager, a San Francisco attorney. "It's not a First Amendment debate, but rather a civil liberties issue."

Eager said many of his friends riding BART on Thursday were upset with the agency's actions, some even calling it a "police state."

Mark Malmberg, 58, of Orinda, Calif., believes that BART could've used a different approach instead of shutting down cellphone usage.

"Even though it sounds like they wanted to avoid a mob gathering, you can't stop people from expressing themselves," Malmberg said. "I hope those who protest can do so in a civil manner."

The ACLU already has a scheduled meeting with BART's police chief on Monday about other issues and Thursday's incident will added be to the agenda, spokeswoman Rebecca Farmer said.

But others said that while the phone shutdown was worth examining, it may not have impinged on First Amendment rights. Gene Policinski, executive director of the First Amendment Center, a nonprofit educational organization, said freedom of expression can be limited in very narrow circumstances if there is an immediate threat to public safety.

"An agency like BART has to be held to a very high standard," he said. "First of all, it has to be an immediate threat, not just the mere supposition that there might be one. And I think the response has to be what a court would consider reasonable, so it has to be the minimum amount of restraint on free expression."

He said if BART's actions are challenged, a court may look more favorably on what it did if expression was limited on a narrow basis for a specific area and time frame, instead of "just indiscriminately closing down cellphone service throughout the system or for a broad area."

University of Michigan law professor Len Niehoff, who specializes in First Amendment and media law issues, found the BART actions troublesome for a few reasons.

He said the First Amendment generally doesn't allow the government to restrict free speech because somebody might do something illegal or to prohibit conversations based on their subject matter. He said the BART actions have been portrayed as an effort to prevent a protest that would have violated the law, but there was no guarantee that would have happened.

"What it really did is it prevented people from talking, discussing ... and mobilizing in any form, peaceful or unpeaceful, lawful or unlawful," he said. "That is, constitutionally, very problematic."

The government does have the right to break up a demonstration if it forms in an area where protests are prohibited and poses a risk to public safety, Niehoff said. But it should not prohibit free speech to prevent the possibility of a protest happening.

"The idea that we're going to keep people from talking about what they might or might not do, based on the idea that they might all agree to violate the law, is positively Orwellian," he said.

India has recently been hit by a string of high-profile corruption scandals, including a multi-billion dollar alleged telecoms scam, alleged financial malpractices in connection with the Delhi 2010 Commonwealth Games and allegations that houses for war widows were diverted to civil servants.

Critics of the government say the scandals point to a pervasive culture of corruption in Mr Singh's administration.

A recent survey said corruption in India cost billions of dollars and threatened to derail growth.

How the hell would I know? You never ask people where they're from Samoans are the resident badasses on the Pacific Rim. Or Korean Special

Gotta love those KSF's... the ROK troops are crazy.. they train using live

I'm not having any trouble making contacts. I didn't have that much trouble making them during solar minimum, to be honest.

What kind of contacts? How much power? How much antenna?

I do mostly QRP HF digital, with a giant groundplane on my roof. When there are ample sunspots I can work the world with 5 Watts on 24 MHz and 28 MHz, which don't hardly work at all right now.

Using 100 watts and a magnetic loop here. Occasionally I will use a center-loaded vertical antenna that's behind the house, but I prefer the loop. I operate mostly on 17, 20 and 30 meters, but occasionally 40m or 80m. I'm often QRP on 40m CW.

Not a free speech violation, of course. The government is under no obligation to furnish you with the means of propagating your speech. I don't know technically how BART brings cell service underground, but whatever that mechanism is, BART owns it and can switch it on or off as they see fit. Quite obviously, they have it as a means of providing a service - a service they are under no obligation to provide in the first place.

If you want to stand on a street corner and harangue passersby, that is your right - but the state doesn't have to furnish you with a megaphone. Free speech does not include the right to have your speech disseminated beyond your own means.

And that is very disturbing . I came across several Texans over the

It is designed to be operated by a PC through a 5 pin/240* DIN plug .

The Greek government lost all future income from lottery sales. The bankers made that a condition for assistance. The foreigners now own the numbers rackets. The citizens are worse off than they were before the 'assistance'.

The sole duty of politicians everywhere seems to be putting the people farther and farther into debt slavery.

What's ridiculous about it? Do you think if you wish to harangue the citizenry, the state has to put a television network at your disposal?

No, they don't. If you wish to buy time on a network for your harangue, fine. But you do not have a right to propagate your message at someone else's expense.

Looks like Obiteme's Magical Misery Tour is headed to Holland, Thursday, Steve.

Given the wonders of his economy and it's half-vast benefits to Michigan, you gotta admire his cluelessness.

He was a local, and used a private teleconference terminal to commit that crime. It was the only uplink built by Microdyne and was in Leesburg Florida. He says the equipment is still there, but the site is abandoned. I have been trying to find it, and the owner. I used to work for Microdyne, and I'd love to add it to my collection of unusual items they built. One that would be impossible to find are the custom 'Command Destruct Receivers' that were made for NASA. I do have one of their custom built C-band signal generators built to align Sat TV receivers at the local plant. it may be the only one that survived when they dropped that product line.

I'm using Windows 7 right now and it's actually been quite stable. I still rather use Linux, but I've abandoned my dream of migrating to Linux until after I can be SURE that new software installs will not break my system.

Our way of governing requires that smart, well-informed citizens exercise their right to vote. If you want a license to serve the public interest you can't broadcast party-line propaganda 24/7. Those are my airwaves, too, and I'm not getting any attention.

One time I was heading back to Fort Walton/Destin from Panama City Beach.Just getting into the Destin area a Sheriff's Deputy pulled me over because I was driving too slow on that two lane Highway, he told me to speed it up untill I get to the four lane Highway.He saw my Bugler hand rolled cigarette butts in the ash tray in my old 1978 Dodge van.I told him it is Bugler tobacco I bought at a food store.He said, I believe you.

getting thru the primaries, let alone a nomination and winning a general election.

But many influential conservative Christians have embraced her expressly atheistic theory of Objectivism that in her books such as The Virtue of Selfishness, they propose that government must be shrunk to a bare minimum so socially Darwinist that it dances with anarchy. Only then can entrepreneurial greed have the free run that liberty demands. Hence RandoΩ½s more nobly titled Atlas Shrugged and The Fountainhead are required reading for the staff of Paul Ryan.

You might enjoy running a live CD of Puppy Linux, which will boot up and run completely in RAM. It's techier than Ubuntu, but you will learn a lot about the nuts and bolts underneath the snazzy desktops.

Did you use the Ubuntu installer? Sudo-apt-get-install? Synaptic? What applications did you have trouble with?

There is no shortage of free help; that's why I like Linux. Nobody demands payment for anything.

that number are not full power full time NPR stations.

Concurring opinions

Justice Hugo Black wrote an opinion that elaborated on his view of the absolute superiority of the First Amendment. He was against any interference with freedom of expression and largely found the content and source of the documents to be immaterial.[4] Justice William O. Douglas largely concurred with Black, arguing that the need for a free press as a check on government prevents any governmental restraint on the press.[5]

Justice William J. Brennan, Jr. wrote separately to explain that the publication of the documents did not qualify as one of the three exceptions to the freedom of expression established in Near v. Minnesota (1931).[6]

Justice Potter Stewart and Justice Byron R. White agreed that it is the responsibility of the Executive to ensure national security through the protection of its information. However, in areas of national defense and international affairs, the President of United States possesses great constitutional independence that is virtually unchecked by the Legislative and Judicial branch. "In absence of governmental checks and balances", per Justice Stewart, "the only effective restraint upon executive policy and power in [these two areas] may lie in an enlightened citizenry - in an informed and critical public opinion which alone can here protect the values of democratic government."[7]

Justice Thurgood Marshall argued that the term "national security" was too broad to legitimize prior restraint, and also argued that it is not the CourtoΩ½s job to create laws where the Congress had not spoken.[8]

On August 6, the 66th anniversary of the US nuclear bombing of Hiroshima, Japanese Prime Minister Naoto Kan said: "Regarding nuclear energy, we will deeply reflect over the myth that nuclear energy is safe. We will thoroughly look into the cause of the [Fukushima] accident, and to secure safety, we'll implement fundamental measures while also decreasing the degree of dependence on nuclear power generation, to aim for a society that does not rely on nuclear power."

To enable market-oriented economies to operate as they should and can, we need to return to the right balance between markets and provision of public goods. That means moving away from both the Anglo-Saxon model of laissez-faire and voodoo economics and the continental European model of deficit-driven welfare states. Both are broken.

The right balance today requires creating jobs partly through additional fiscal stimulus aimed at productive infrastructure investment. It also requires more progressive taxation; more short-term fiscal stimulus with medium- and long-term fiscal discipline; lender-of-last-resort support by monetary authorities to prevent ruinous runs on banks; reduction of the debt burden for insolvent households and other distressed economic agents; and stricter supervision and regulation of a financial system run amok; breaking up too-big-to-fail banks and oligopolistic trusts.

Over time, advanced economies will need to invest in human capital, skills and social safety nets to increase productivity and enable workers to compete, be flexible and thrive in a globalised economy. The alternative is - like in the 1930s - unending stagnation, depression, currency and trade wars, capital controls, financial crisis, sovereign insolvencies, and massive social and political instability.

Nouriel Roubini is Chairman of Roubini Global Economics, Professor of Economics at the Stern School of Business, New York University, and co-author of the book Crisis Economics.

Economic Meltdown Will Lead to Peace; Great Progressive Talk Show Host & Silver Should be ~$115.00, it's $40 now

Contents-
1. Inevitable Total Economic Meltdown Will Lead to Justice & Peace
2. Thomm Harmann - Great Progressive Talk Show Host
3. Sprott: Silver Should be ~$115.00 -- but is only $40 now.

1. Inevitable Total Economic Meltdown Will Lead to Justice & Peace
Watch for total economic meltdown "the dissolution of the stock markets" -- it may take place in the next few weeks, months, or years, but it is sure to happen. Don't worry, it will be for the good of mankind and will lead to the eventual creation of a new economic system that serves the interests of the majority, rather than exploiting them. Benjamin Creme in London has been talking about the impending collapse and the remarkable benefits the entire human family will reap, shortly thereafter. If that's news to you, please see * More information after #3 below.

2. Thomm Harmann - Great Progressive Talk Show Host
If you're interested in progressive politics, then you might want to hear Thom Hartmann if you don't already...
Hartmann is the USA's #1 progressive talk show host (also simulcast as TV in 40 million homes by Dish Network/Free Speech TV), and the New York Times bestselling, 4-times project Censored winning author of 21 books in print. He is live daily from noon-3 PM ET in New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Atlanta, Detroit, Seattle, Portland, Phoenix, Santa Fe, Grand Rapids, Asheville, Lansing, and on over one hundred other outlets nationwide including Chicago, Santa Barbara, Minneapolis, Madison, Denver, and on XM and Sirius Satellite radio, and simulcast as a TV show on the Free Speech TV Network (www.freespeech.org) carried on the national satellite TV system, Dish Network.-- also four-time Project Censored-award-winning, New York Times best-selling author of 20 books in print and over 200 nationally published articles. His daily progressive radio talk show, now in its eighth year on the air, replaced Al Franken on the Air America Radio Network, is syndicated and distributed to radio and television stations nationwide and in Europe and Africa by Dial-Global (commercial radio), Pacifica (non-commercial radio), and Free Speech

TV (nationwide satellite TV distribution on the Dish TV Network and to local cable TV networks). http://www.thomhartmann.com/thom Hartmann has a great (my favorite) program-- 1 hour program at 9p & 11p (eastern time) M-F here:
http://rt.com/on-air/rt-america-air/IMO, the Alonya show & the Kaiser report also at the above rt.com web site are also, very well done.

3. Sprott: Silver Should be ~$115.00 -- but is only $40 now.
Eric Sprott ï¿½ The Price of Silver Should be $110 to $120 Today
http://kingworldnews.com/kingworldnews/KWN_DailyWeb/Entries/2011/8/18_Eric_Sprott_-_The_Price_of_Silver_Should_be_$110_to_$120_Today.html
With the Dow down almost 500 and gold surging above $1,825, today King World News interviewed billionaire Eric Sprott, Chairman of the $10 billion strong Sprott Asset Management to get his take on the action and what he is doing with his own money. When asked about his charitable foundation selling gold and buying more physical silver Sprott stated, ï¿½Weï¿½ve put a notice in that we are going to sell two million shares of the Sprott Physical Trust, which would generate something like $32 million of proceeds, and itï¿½s my intention to move that into (physical) silver. As you know I have opined very often that I think silver should trade at a 16/1 ratio to gold. That would imply a price today of something like $110 or $120, (and today) itï¿½s $40.

* More information - concerning the inevitable "economic meltdown"

3 quotes regarding the markets, copied from Share International:
"ï¿½Volatility will remain high as one crisis leads to another...
Despite the inevitable attempts by the ï¿½men of moneyï¿½ to continue the old ways of unfettered free markets, Capitalism as we have known it is dead.

ï¿½...Men must change dramatically the present way of life, & embrace simpler forms of living & working. Gone are the days in which men raped & ravaged the planet at will, without a thought for the generations still to come, neither seeing nor caring ought for the environment...ï¿½

ï¿½...the dissolution of the stock markets... will release the pressures now being imposed on governments by currency speculation, & allow a fair & equitable trading system to be developed. Short term measures must recognize the special & urgent need of poorer nations for succor.
In particular, the problems of hunger & disease must be addressed without delay. New methods of distribution of resources, based on sharing & need, will supplant the present chaotic modes which so divide the world. The blind following of market forces, whose myopic rule causes such misery today, will give way to an enlightened & just consideration for the needs of all...ï¿½

3 quotes from the Work of Benjamin Creme
"...We think... we can go on in the old ways... more competition, more greed... It is not so... If two-thirds of the worldï¿½s population areliving in poverty then the economic system does not work. If we think that they will go on without asking that it work for them, then we are sorely out of step with reality. Maitreya will make that clear...

"When the people's voice is not heard, there will inevitably be revolution...

"People will begin to understand that humanity is travelling together as one huge group, at different stages of the evolutionary journey. We are all travelling together along a path of evolution to something tremendous which our minds at present find difficult to truly understand."

==========

Throughout history, when Humanity has reached a major point of crisis, a Teacher is sent into the world to show the way forward. All the major world religions expect a further revelation to be given by a great Teacher. Christians hope for the return of the Christ, Jews await the Messiah, Buddhists look for the coming of Maitreya Buddha, while Muslims await the Imam Mahdi, and Hindus the reincarnation of Krishna. According to esoteric teachings, these are all different names for the same individual: Maitreya, the World Teacher. He is the World Teacher for everyone, religious or not & is an educator in the broadest sense of the word. His first major public appearance is imminent. He will NOT come across as a religious figure nor will he endorse any particular religion over any other. He does NOT want anyone to worship Him, but rather to think of Him as an elder brother. His message can be summarized as ï¿½share & save the worldï¿½. He will inspire humanity to see itself as one family, & to create world peace through sharing, justice & co-operation. The time for unbridled greed, political corruption, environmental degradation, war & poverty has passed.

"The day that hunger is eradicated from the earth there will be the greatest spiritual explosion the world has ever known. Humanity cannot imagine the joy that will burst into the world on the day of that great revolution." Federico Garcia Lorca
==========

"The minority, the ruling class at present, has the schools and press, usually the Church as well, under its thumb. This enables it to organize and sway the emotions of the masses, & make its tool of them...

AM radio covers the entire continent. FM radio only covers cities and surrounding suburbs. Half the people live outside cities.

Name 3 NPR opinion programs. Try to find opinion on the Dallas NPR affiliate.

Ask WLS if they'd like to swap facilities with WBEZ, tell us what they say.

Am radio has a much shorter range than FM.
There is no AM radio station covering the entire continent.
Programs are franchised on FM just as they are on AM.

So NPR doesn't offer programming that you believe they should and you want to blame conservative broadcasting for it.

You need to get your language translator serviced. I am saying there is nothing on NPR that advocates for a particular political movement, and that even if there was, NPR is not as available as say Michael Savage, Sean Hannity, Mark Levin, etc., are any weeknight, across the AM dial, virtually everywhere in the continental USA. Anybody who's driven long distance is painfully aware of what I'm talking about.

OMAHA - The Air Force said yesterday that it is discharging a hero of the so-called birther movement who refused to report to duty in Germany for a few days earlier this month because he doubts President ObamaoΩ½s citizenship.

Staff Sergeant Daryn Moran expects to be discharged within the next week. Although the 41-year-old Nebraska man refused to report to duty and had called for ObamaoΩ½s arrest in statements on websites, several other things contributed to his discharge, including his opposition to ObamaoΩ½s decision to allow gays to serve openly in the military.

DNA later failed to link the men to the crime, and the state Supreme Court ruled in November that all three could present new evidence to the trial court in an effort to clear them.

The DNA tests were conducted between December 2005 and September 2007, according to the Arkansas Supreme Court.

The material included hair from a ligature used to bind Moore and a hair recovered from a tree stump near where the bodies were found, court documents said.

The hair found in the ligature was consistent with Branch's stepfather, Terry Hobbs, while the hair found on the tree stump was consistent with the DNA of a friend of Hobbs', according to the documents.

Police have never considered Hobbs a suspect, and he maintains that he had nothing to do with the murders.

I know what my rules tell me.

I'm not really worthy of personal attacks, being an enfeebled old man and all. I have worked in radio news since the early 1960s and I used to like to hide and watch. Since I no longer do the radio nyu-waz I am able to apply my agnostically gathered life experiences from a more objective focus. The conclusions I arrive at are not based on a lifetime of partisan activism. I ran Cato Institute editorials on the Houston Pacifica station, for example. I've never glommed onto someone else's religion.

All it takes is for BART to decide that providing cell repeaters is costing more than it's worth and the can pretty much shut down all cell service on their trains and in their stations.

I think Verizon and ATT, et al, put up most of the cost; they certainly would have to field the complaints. BART has to provide "state of the art" facilities, which includes connectivity while you're waiting for a train.

Yead, in fact of the business,,, wayyyyyy back in the 1950s - 1960s, I read in either Popular Mechanics or Popular Science magazine that New Yawk City installed some equipment in the auto tunnels under the Hudson River so that people listening to the radio in their cars wouldn't lose

AM a.k.a.Mediumwave broadcast can travel for thousands of miles (especially at night) on aregular basis . Some of these transmitters, outside of US, run into a Megawatt power range . FM a.k.a. VHF signals are of a limited Line-of-Sight coverage ,except for some rare events in the sky that cause signals not intended to travel much beyond the horizon to appear on the opposite side of the world . radio propagation is always full of surprizes .

The DNA is not a direct link to Hobbs but matched his hair type. I say that since the 3 men are taking a plea deal for the murders and earlier confessed to the police that they killed the boys that the right people were prosecuted and found criminally responsible for the murders. With the treasonous Dixie Chicks and other liberals financing the 3 killers defense it makes sense for the State to arrange a plea deal, after all at least they served 18 years for their crime.

IMHO.

I don't think they will make military retirement a 401(k) plan, but I can see the military making it harder to reenlist after ten years of service unless you have a special skill. When I was in about 18 years ago there was a reduction in force and they were discharging everyone with the slightest infraction in their military jacket. One artillery sergeant was discharged for having been overweight by 1 pound and a slightly high BMI. He had 12 years in with 3 kids with no infractions of any other kind.

Gawd you are fucking deranged. There are entire states where all the opinion shows are right wing. This is not healthy for America. Why do you defend the indefensible? Why are you such a hateful old man?

I'd love to know where those figures come from. I know personally of two liberals on AM radio: Colmes and Schultz. Air America was put together to counter the overwhelming right wing talk on AM radio, but it failed. I think the actual ratio is something like 15:1 in favor of the right. As far as NPR, we listen a lot here, and there is very little political opinion one way or another, it's predominantly shows more like magazine shows.

Yes, well, he probably can look at the birth certificate obama has released, listen to the experts, and realize that obama has committed a crime and offed a fraudulent birth certificate off on the public -- a crime fitting the definition of "High Treason."

Thankfully my dentist keeps her politics to herself.

I'm amazed that people only get halfway to the truth. Sure, the Democrats are inept sociopathic whores, who use twisted logic and rationale to sleep at night, but so are the Republicans!

The reasons given by Senator McConnell for blocking all legislation are quite misguided.

Used to attract the brightest and best, now it just attracts weirdos,

I think Roy makes them up. I picture him as a kind of Jabba the Hut [sic] with extra punctuation marks.

They are on satellite and in a few big cities and neither is much of a leftie. Colmes is too passive and Shultz is a big dumb jock. Neither represents intelligently, like Thom Hartmann, who has a big AFTRS following. When Limbaugh started pretty much all his stations also carried Larry King. That was more balanced than today.
George Noory is part of the birther fringe.

It will be interesting to see data from alternate news sources and people on the ground when NATO and UN troops start running into the masses of civilians Qaddafi has armed with fully autos.

But the, the only good NATO or UN troop is a dead one ...

Are you sure you don't mean PSK?

BPSK31 is very popular. Here's a quick and dirty way to get decoding in

THE ROOTS OF OBAMA's RAGE

The real Obama is a man shaped by experiences far different from those of most Americans; he is a much stranger, more determined, and exponentially more dangerous man than you'd ever imagined. He is not motivated by the civil rights struggles of African Americans in the 1960s those battles leave him wholly untouched. He is not motivated by the socialist or Marxist propaganda that hypnotized a whole generation of wooly minded academics and condescending liberals those concepts also leave him cold.

What really motivates Barack Obama is an inherited rage an often masked, but profound rage that comes from his African father; an anticolonialist rage against Western dominance, and most especially against the wealth and power of the very nation Barack Obama now leads. It is this rage that explains the previously inexplicable, and that gives us a startling look at what might lie ahead.

In The Roots of Obama's Rage you'll learn: Why Obama's economic policies are actually designed to make America poorer compared to the rest of the world Why Obama will welcome a nuclear Iran Why Obama sees America as a rogue nation worse than North Korea The real reason Obama banished a bust of Winston Churchill from the White House and ordered NASA to praise the scientific contributions of Muslims Why Obama would like to make America's superpower status a thing of the past

http://www.forbes.com/forbes/2010/0927/politics-socialism-capitalism-private-enterprises-obama-business-problem.html
HOW OBAMA THINKS

Barack Obama is the most antibusiness president in a generation, perhaps in American history. Thanks to him the era of big government is back. Obama runs up taxpayer debt not in the billions but in the trillions. He has expanded the federal government's control over home mortgages, investment banking, health care, autos and energy.

IT REALLY IS AS SIMPLE AS THAT.
LIB STRATEGIC INSANITY CAN AND MUST BE DEFEATED.
EVIL HAS NO POWER WHEN THE GOOD REMAIN UNAFRAID.

With 14 million Americans out of work, a volatile stock market and a historic downgrade of the country's credit rating, President Obama is set to begin a 10-day retreat Thursday at a 28-acre Martha's Vineyard compound called Blue Heron Farm, which costs an estimated $50,000 per week to rent. That divide — and the presumed hypocrisy of a president who has pledged not to rest "until every American looking for a job can find one," going golfing and biking on an island playground for wealthy celebrities — has been too much for political pundits to resist.

Obama’s decision to head to a popular playground for wealthy elites in the face of intense media scrutiny is a surprisingly reckless move. It is a particularlly foolish act just 14 months away from a presidential election where he will likely end up the underdog rather than the favourite. The contrast between an imperious, out-of-touch US president and the economic plight of tens of millions of Americans could not be starker. Obama’s holiday will no doubt come to haunt him in November next year, with the economy the number one issue for voters.

Which begs the question – why did the president go ahead with his vacation despite the worst approval ratings of his presidency, plunging stock markets, falling consumer confidence, and overwhelming public disillusion with his handling of the economy? I think the answer lies in Obama’s professorial-style arrogance, and a condescending approach towards ordinary Americans.

This is a US presidency with a distinctly Upstairs Downstairs approach towards running the country. At the end of the day, Barack Obama is in a serious state of denial if he believes the US electorate won’t care if their president acts with impunity at a time of tremendous economic turmoil and uncertainty. I suspect that when he returns to Washington in September, Mr Obama may get a rather nasty shock in the polls from angry voters who won’t take kindly to their president going AWOL in the lap of luxury during a major financial crisis.

Like Clinton, OBAMA does it because he CAN...
because he CAN and FORCE you to watch...
PERIOD.

Like a LIB, he does it because he believes that Destruction of a Value which exists somehow brings Value to that which is not, nor will ever be.

ALL LIBs are Moral Vandals of this ilk.
Which is why LIBERALISM can and MUST be defeated.

IT REALLY IS AS SIMPLE AS THAT.

LIBs plead for a Morality which holds COMPROMISE as its standard of Value, making it possible to judge Virtue on the basis of the number of Values which one is willing to Betray.

Good men can watch as conflagration engulfs their world
to make a paradise for the LIB kind, a world with cities ablaze with bodies littering the streets...
and forever allow them to reign over the ruins

OR they can do more than Absolutely Nothing and rebuild from the Rubble.
It's too late to change the world with mere dreams and talk.
IMPEACH BARACK OBAMA.

This is NOT the HOPE you have been searching for.

I remember Judas, he was the one elected President before he Disgraced his office and Betrayed us All.

"The Road to Tyranny begins with the Destruction of the Truth".

Not quite:

http://tinyurl.com/3vxznwa

Then there is these Department of Labor stats:

June 2001: 132,047,000 people employed
January 2008: 137,996,000 people employed
Increase during that six-and-a-half-year period: 5,949,000 people

January 2008: 137,996,000 people employed
February 2010: 129,246,000 people employed
Decrease during the roughly two-year period: 8,750,000 people

If you prefer to look at Current Population Survey numbers:

June 2001: 136,873,000 people employed
January 2008: 146,407,000 people employed
Increase over about six and a half years: 9,534,000 people

January 2008: 146,407,000 people employed
February 2010: 138,698,000 people employed
Decrease over about two years: 7,709,000 people

http://tinyurl.com/6y69u6x

I would take either of those sources over a blog entry.

No, of course he did NOT have carnal knowledge with chickens.
Disgusting jammers of the Liberty Net such as WA9KJI called him "Chicken Fornicator" (the CF in his callsign). I heard KN4CF on the low end of the 75 meter phone (SSB) band just a few years ago. Dunno

"Down goes capitalism", said Raul Castro banging shoe on table while admiring the happy peasants through his picture window who were seen toiling in cane fields and singing revolutionary songs. Soon they could afford to buy a burro and speed away on the busy dirt road traffic heading away from Havana.

Liberty Net: August 13, 2011

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

EVEN THOSE WHO LISTEN to the Liberty Net starting from a hostile position eventually come around, because they start to understand that net participants are speaking from the heart, and from personal experience, and are not beholden to the criminal political parties or oligarchs that misrule us. In short, the Liberty Net is _real_.

Here are some of the opinions and ideas debated this time on amateur radioï¿½s most exciting net:

ï¿½ Sony Pictures ï¿½ which is run largely by the same crowd that runs the rest of Hollywood ï¿½ has recently announced a movie which will show Obamaï¿½s ï¿½heroicï¿½ role in killing Osama. The projected release date? One month before the 2012 election. (22 minutes)

ï¿½ Israel has perfected one of the slickest rackets around: Spend a few million dollars to fly a third of Congress on a junket to Israel ï¿½ and get $10 billion of ï¿½aidï¿½ in return. Why should impoverished American taxpayers be forced to give money to the worldï¿½s richest ethnic group? (34 minutes)

ï¿½ Were 401k accounts purposely designed to allow the legalized looting of peopleï¿½s retirement funds? (44 minutes)

ï¿½ It is a true measure of working peopleï¿½s loss of belief in the System when we see many of them asking to be paid directly in cash, and offering substantial discounts for doing so. (1 hour 1 minute)

ï¿½ Why donï¿½t the fiduciary responsibility laws apply to the Social Security trust funds? Shouldnï¿½t the politicians who have stolen the funds ï¿½ and those who ï¿½investedï¿½ them in worthless government bonds ï¿½ be jailed? (2 hours 2 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are Congressmen allowed to trade the stocks of military contractors? Theyï¿½re already getting perks from the Israeli lobby, and this trading just gives them another incentive to support the murderous, illegal, and endless wars for Israel in the Middle East. (2 hours 17 minutes)

ï¿½ The oligarchs love Black rioters, like the ones who torched whole sections of London last week. The reason? The rioters give the oligarchs an excuse to ï¿½regulateï¿½ speech on the Internet, and establish a police state on the streets ï¿½ just in time to prevent a revolution against the bankers, whose crimes are becoming more well known. (2 hours 27 minutes)

ï¿½ The establishment went to great lengths to ensure that Ron Paul would not come in first in Iowa, and then they ignored his near-tie. They went all-out to boost the vote of their creature, uber-Zionist Michele Bachmann. (2 hours 37 minutes)

ï¿½ The Chinese are now making deals with cash-strapped cities and counties, and are setting up tax-advantaged all-Chinese colonies in the United States. (3 hours 30 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And Al, N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Please check in with your call sign, and add your voice to the most exciting net on the amateur bands ï¿½ every Saturday night, starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our deepest thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in running the Liberty Net, which is now in its 37th year.

The GREEN BAT prepares to take FLIGHT!

Like Clinton, OBAMA does it because he CAN...
because he CAN and FORCE you to watch...
PERIOD.

Like a LIB, he does it because he believes that Destruction of a Value which exists
somehow brings Value to that which is not, nor will ever be.

ALL LIBs are Moral Vandals of this ilk.
Which is why LIBERALISM can and MUST be defeated.

IT REALLY IS AS SIMPLE AS THAT.

LIBs plead for a Morality which holds COMPROMISE as its standard of Value, making it possible to judge Virtue on the basis of the number of Values which one is willing to Betray.

Do you FEAR what I Fear?

Good men can watch as conflagration engulfs their world
to make a paradise for the LIB kind, a world with cities ablaze with bodies littering the streets...
and forever allow them to reign over the ruins

OR they can do more than Absolutely Nothing and rebuild from the Rubble.
It's too late to change the world with mere dreams and talk.

Are you under the impression that there exists no form on media other than AM Radio?

There's no movies?

No books?

No magazines?

No Internet?

No broadcast TV?

No cable TV?

No colleges?

Nothing?

Just AM radio?

You have to pay to see movies. You have to buy books and read them. Same for magazines (which are typically no fresher than 3 days, more likely 3 weeks.) The internet is outrageously expensive, requires special equipment, and has very limited availability outside of cities. It is 75% porn and spam and should have very little credibility when it comes to current events. Broadcast TV is entirely controlled by the corporate elite. It is going to be eliminated in the next few years anyway. Cable? See "Internet". Colleges makes no sense. That is not where one goes for current events and commentary.

Of all the media listed above, the only one that penetrates 100% is AM radio (and then only at night some places). Every town has a flamethrower of record, some cities have 2 or three. If they all tilt right how is that fair to people that tilt left?

All government functions are open to the public unless there is an obvious compelling state interest in keeping a proceeding secret. This

We'd be better off if he didn't return, but resign or was impeached.
OBAMA has done all the damage he's intended to do, all he's doing now is pretending to reign over the ruins, pretending to conduct the symphony of destruction of his own creation as LIBs continue to urge the innocent and unknowing to leap into the rapidly thining mosch pit.

DESERVE FREEDOM.
DEFEAT LIB STRATEGIC INSANITY. IMPEACH BARACK OBAMA.

The pointy headed liberals are too ashamed to admit that they 'like' Clinton because he made no pretence about his vision of future worth having, wherein Haiti is but a miniature, a world with cities ablaze and bodies littering the streets.

"We'll actually have to work very hard to kill as many people in the 21st century.
What's the difference?
This time, you think the victim could be you," Clinton'07

"to leave now we would send a message to terrorists and other potential adversaries around the world that they can change our policies by killing our people.
It would be open season on Americans."
-- Bill Clinton '93
just before he pulled out of Somalia.

OBAMA has merely shown us all how actually-easy it was...

To abandon this area now -- and to rely only on efforts against alQaeda from a distance -- would significantly hamper our ability to keep the pressure on al Qaeda, and create an unacceptable risk of additional attacks on our homeland and our allies.

Most of those ancient/archaic modes were "invented" before the computer, and while tradition is nice, it is folly that, they have not been replaced with new coding/compaction/encryption routines ... but then, it is not like the data is a dvd sized sized data chunk ... so a "horse and buggy" will still work.

As "the traditionalists" age/die/are-replaced, I look forward to this changing, in the future.

I'm not picking on them. I am merely cautioning people that all you need is a way to get audio from your radio to your soundcard (e.g. 3.5mm Male to Male interconnect; RCA to 3.5mm adapter; whatever's appropriate mechanically). I suggest fldigi software. It works fine and it doesn't cost a nickel. Installs in seconds.

Actually things are exactly how they seem. The best place to hide something is where everyone can see it.

Wikileaks proved there is no grand conspiracy. Just a bunch of pathetic stuff, really.

Now if you want to talk about the American Taliban, aka Bachman and Perry and the Dominionist plot to seize America, I'm with you on that one.

Your buddy Rick Dale at Ameican Restoration (on tee vee) would slap a little bit of paint on it, he would get $5,000 for it.Those fools bringing him their junk to restore, he is laughing at them all the way to the bank.His son got a free junk electric fan, he restored it for a fathers day gift, he wound up paying $50.00 for a new motor.I have an old electric fan just like that one, it still works as good as new.I have a lot of old electric fans, some of them are at least eighty years old or older, they still work too.

Two more items to add to your list. I filed FOIA requests for this info and got blown off with no data.

(1) Where is the money or what was it used for that Chrysler and GM were reported to have repaid?

(2) The US sold 30 million bbls of oil from the strategic oil reserve when the il prices were spiking. My questions were:

(a) Who bought the oil?
(b) How much did they pay for it?
(c) Where is this money now or what was it used for.

To put (2) in perspective 30 million bbls of oil @ 90$US/bbl [then current market price] = 2.7 billion $US, which is a lot of taxpayer money.

We invented him; we can kill him off as needed. I personally don't think he was anything but a dramatic foil for the "D-sider". I'd love to hear Poppy Bush and Osama's dad talking about getting rid of that thorn in Global Inc.'s side. How dare someone be moralled and principled and religious. "The truth tellers?" Who are you calling "the truth tellers?" You certainly can not be calling 5 competing news agencies "the truth tellers" after they took videos of New York City and then superimposed a jet into those videos, then played those videos on TV and then blamed the total destruction of the World Trade Center on jets that were never in New York City.

You do know that the World Trade Center is still there, right? You can't see them because of the NSA holographic projection. Dick Cheney personally harvested the brains and heart valves of all the workers in the building. The CIA makes regular flights over NYC spraying contrails to keep everyone numb and quiet about it.

I know because I saw it on the InterWeb.

NPR is not political. Period. Thom Hartmann makes Limbaugh and Hannitoad look like ranting propagandists; he is balance, not freaking Click and Clack.

On the other hand, AFRTS DOES have Ed Schultz, Alan Colmes vs. Rush and the Manatee. They used to carry Dr. Laura, but thank the Lord they put her out to pasture..

I did and it states: "when you have two competing theories that make exactly the same predictions, the simpler one is the better."

That can certainly be applied here because the use of real jets in New York City would have been dangerous because they could have upset the previously installed explosives so the simpler route was to use topograms or images of jets superimposed on prerecorded video instead.
http://septemberclues.info/

And do not forget what happened to Jodi Foster in Contact when she quoted Occam's razor. She got the money needed to continue the project she was in meaning they caved to testimony about what happened in 18 hours after all.

You do remeber BBC is the one that reported 20 minutes in advance that building seven had collapsed and their live feed still shows it standing in the background! I think they have a crystal ball or ESP.

CNN was also early and there could have been thousands of people that had heard about 9/11 before it happened and did not believe it until they saw two towers reduced to dust so then some of them got busy and started calling all the news channels they could think of.

It is certainly strange to see the effect that a couple of topograms in a SCI-fi movie about a Terrorist Attack can do to society.

Ask whoever bombed Bagdhad back to Stonehenge. Clinton killed 500,000 Iraqi babies with illegal blockades. Poppy Bush killed 20,000 retreating Iraqi foot soldiers for sport, then lied to the Marsh Arabs and killed another 100,000 of them. I can go on if you like...

Maybe you should wait until the drugs are out of your system.

Clinton killed half a million babies. Ya know, I despise Bill, but I have a hard time blaming him for something he didn't do. What is your proof?

As to killing retreating soldiers being killed. That's what happens. If you surrender then you are out of it. if you are retreating then you may very well be regrouping for a counterattack. That's just the way it works. See reference to the Falaise Pocket in 1944.

Bush did lie to the marshg Arabs, yes. nut he did not kill them. Unless of course you are absolving the person who gave the orders and the trigger pullers of any repsonsibility. Which is par for the progrressive course.
Guilt is never for actual actions, it's for advancing an agenda.

Oh and when did this happen? You have seen pictures of destroyed cities, right. German and Japanese cities at the end of WWII. Guernica.

You do realize what it takes to do that much destruction, right?

When exactly was Bagdad "bombed back to Stonehenge" and by whom? How much ordnance was expended? What aircraft were used? How many sorties did it take?

You do realize you are accusing American pilots of war crimes.

What's it like to live under a delusion?

Sounds like a football game, only brain dead meat heads choose side and root their team in that idiots game ... we are discussing crooks in our public servant positions ... and we don't give a damn about what football team they are on, we just care that they are crooks and want them ALL in prison ... the people playing "football politics" are best just ignored -- they are never going to have anything worthwhile to contribute to the problem.

It's a matter of historical fact.

"Bombs are merciful compared to what Clinton has done to the innocent children of Iraq, the most vulnerable of all, by maintaining ten years of the harshest sanctions in the history of mankind, begun on August 6, 1990, and kept in place at the insistence of the United States. On May 12, 1996, television's "Sixty Minutes" interviewed Madeleine Albright (then U.S. ambassador to the UN, now Secretary of State). Leslie Stahl asked Albright, "We have heard half a million children have died [from economic sanctions in Iraq]. That's more children than died in Hiroshima. Is the price worth it?"

Albright replied, "I think this is a very hard choice. But the price, we think, is worth it."

I believe there is a special place in hell reserved for Madeleine Albright.

Yes, even four and a half years ago, 500,000 Iraqi children had already died as a direct result of economic sanctions. Over one million Iraqi civilians have died from the sanctions, mostly children under age five. Those are not Iraqi figures -- those figures come from Unicef, the World Health Organization, the UN's Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), the UN's Department of Humanitarian Affairs, and other international sources. The "oil-for-food" program is so ineffectual that two consecutive UN directors of that program (Denis Haliday and Hans Von Sponeck) resigned, out of protest that they were presiding over a humanitarian disaster which can only be called genocide. They were UN Assistant Secretaries General, the highest ranking UN personnel ever to resign for reasons of conscience. Now Denis Haliday and Hans

Von Sponeck are touring America and other countries, pleading for an end to the sanctions on Iraq. "

And you would do what? If these people want to make pretend it's still the 7th century that is their business.

We are supposed to lead by example. Except for North Korea and Iran, I don't think there are any other subversive nations left. Most countries have the IMF and World Bank to do battle with; let's leave the tribal people without stock markets alone.

It's not the baby milk factories that worry me. It's the baby oil factories.
Feeding babies into a press just to extract their oil? Call me weird, but that seems a bit extreme.

Actually there was only one person that said he saw a plane,he was a representative from CNN,the rest of the people just claimed they saw a plane so they could share his limelight! Peter Jennings and Berry Jennings told it like it was untill they were killed off!

There is a video of a hologramed plane it looses its wings and grows them back a couple of times before it melts into the background without coming apart. The chopper videos in real time does not show even a hologram,could they have not been in its reflection?

Some of the people saw the phony plane through the tree limbs in Battery Park,but when the pictures were released the limbs had dissappeared.Strange thing,these people also saw UFOs and missiles and orbs,lions and tigers and bears,oh my.*orb is a ghostly image.

I personaly think what they saw was a Pyramid!

There is more than enough oil to finish the job of rendering the Milking babies is pretty extreme, too. I'm amazed that we justify a coup in Iran in 1953 by pointing out that Saddam may make chemical weapons 38 years later.

Our forefathers [?] gave us no such thing. They pointed out that certain rights are inherent and cannot be taken away. You have the right to be brainwashed into voting against yourself, over and over, until you die,

You had better read the Declaration of Independence
It's a CLEAR outline and precedent setter.

You are a fool, while it being true that the forefathers acknowledged that they are "creator given right", and cannot be tampered with by man, or mans' law, no one had them until the forefathers "gave" them to us, by constructing a form of government, constitution, public offices, etc.
which respected them ...

Today, the crooks which have usurped our public servant offices and illegally hold them have "taken" them away ... and continue to take more each and everyday.

It sure is. It plainly states that if the government gets out of hand, we have the right to take over and that's the main reason our forefathers put the 2nd amendment in the constitution. People like kookyout and deep shit, that can't understand this are complete asinine

The Declaration of Independence is a press release. It has no legal authority. Nevertheless, I don't remember the unalienable right to do anything but live free and pursue happiness.

Big money is the "force of darkness" today, same as it was in 1776.

ROTFLMAO Do not forget that there were a lot of people that said they saw a jet ram the PentaCON and we know that is a crock of shit.

Shanksville was a crock of shit and the story that NIST give that 8 floors in WTC7 could simultaneously collapse straight down was also a crock of shit.

Given the number of people that knew something was up on 9/11 I'm surprised there were not a lot more videos of the event.

You're so cute. AC-130s won't fly if you interdict the fuel, spares and

Besides are you suggesting the use of gunships in CONUS to attack civilians

The truthers are ex[posing the Government atrocities here and abroad,this is why they recieve soo much criticism.

There is a video of a hologramed plane it looses its wings and grows them back a couple of times before it melts into the background without coming apart. The chopper videos in real time does not show even a hologram,could they have not been in its reflection?

It has been brought to my attention that Gideon Nadeau was the one credited for producing that video of the hologramed plane.

Just after he captured the crowds reaction to the first explosion in tower one . Gideon made haste to the next location a specific place to capture the hologramed plane hiing tower two,while Jules left the phoney gas leak and hurried to take pictures of the inside lobby of tower one exposing a blast that had knocked all the windows out in the lobby and there was no fire at all.

The question now remains was it a hologram or just a cartooned plane they had on file to fake the plane for the TV audience.Knowing the Nadeaus were sent here to capture the specticle on film,points out,no plane at all not even a hologram!?

Laid-off IT pros list their reasons for filing suit against Molina Healthcare, its former CIO and its outsourcer

By Patrick Thibodeau, Computerworld
August 22, 2011 10:19 AM ET

On the day they were fired early last year, about 40 IT employees at Molina Healthcare Inc. had been gathered in a conference room for what they were told would be a planning meeting. At the same time, laptop computers were being collected from the assembled workers' desks.

During the meeting, Molina's then-CIO, Amir Desai, informed the workers that they were being laid off for financial reasons, "not because of [their] performance."

The layoffs came amid rising tensions over a number of issues, including the expanding role of an offshore IT contractor at Molina.

The workers raised the concerns with Desai during the meeting.

"I felt they were expecting us to be asking questions about Cobra and unemployment and all that," said Bonita Shok, one of the laid-off IT employees. "Instead, we were being quite confrontational about why they are laying us off and keeping all these H-1B workers."

"I have never experienced a group of employees who were so angry," said a human resources manager who was in the meeting to answer questions from employees about benefits. The HR manager asked not to be identified.

"They felt their work was being offshored -- they were angry at the H-1B employees that were being hired," said the longtime HR industry veteran who had been hired to execute the IT layoffs at Molina, a managed health care provider that serves Medicaid and Medicare recipients. "I [had] never felt the backlash that I felt from Molina employees."

The employees, who lost their jobs in January 2010, never got answers to their questions about the company's IT outsourcing strategy.

Instead, 18 of them filed a lawsuit in California state court earlier this year against Molina, its CIO at the time and its outsourcing contractor, Cognizant Technology Solutions.

The HR employee, who was later laid off as well, is a witness for the plaintiffs in the case.

The plaintiffs contend, among other things, that they are victims of discrimination due to national origin. The lawsuit charges that the employees were fired because the companies sought to employ people "whose national origin, race and/or ethnicity was exclusively Indian," and didn't want to employ Americans or green-card holders.

Molina contends that the lawsuit is grounded in "falsehoods and malicious gossip." Cognizant has said that the lawsuit is without merit and that it "will vigorously contest it."

Desai, through his attorney, says the lawsuit is itself guilty of "an unfair discriminatory bias." Desai himself has since left Molina.

Of the workers who are part of this suit, 10 brought an earlier claim against Molina that was settled in mediation before this case was filed. The mediation agreements did not settle the case for all the workers and did not include current lawsuit defendants Cognizant and Desai.

While what happened at Molina is still in dispute, job displacement because of offshore outsourcing is a fact of life in today's IT workplace. While there are no government numbers that detail its extent, the broad outlines of the story told by the Molina workers should be familiar to other IT workers.

Outsourcing engagements often start when offshore IT services companies bring in workers, typically on H-1B or L-1 visas, to learn a company's IT processes. Then the work is moved overseas. Molina employees contend that's what happened to them.

James Otto, the attorney representing the Molina employees in the lawsuit, claims that about 200 visa-holding workers have been brought into the company.

Otto has told the former Molina IT workers that such activity is a form of segregation. "Today you're being segregated based on your national origin," he said.

Several years before the layoff, there were about 70 or 80 IT employees at Molina, according to a group of more than a dozen former Molina IT workers who met with Computerworld late last month. Many of the former Molina workers asked that their names not be published.

At that time, Cognizant had a small presence at the firm, mostly to supplement internal work. The employees said they felt no threat at the time. In fact, said Shok, "there was a feeling of camaraderie on the team."

But beginning around 2007 things started to change.

Most of the immediate IT managers were either laid off or quit, according to the employees. At the same time, the number of contractors increased. The lawsuit alleges that Desai and his management team "hire[d] and promote[d] only Indian nationals to management positions."

Desai, through his attorney, says the allegation is false. Of the six IT managers reporting to him, two were of Indian descent, he said.

"My client is dismayed both at the false allegations in Mr. Otto's lawsuit and its ethnically inflammatory undertone suggesting that Mr. Desai is biased against Americans and favors Indians solely because he is 'of Indian descent,' " wrote Desai's attorney, Edward Raskin in an email to Computerworld.

Raskin also points out that Desai was born in the U.S. and graduated from a U.S. university. He says the lawsuit avoids certain facts. "For example, some of the employees who lost their jobs at Molina were 'of Indian descent,' which contradicts Mr. Otto's suggestion that Mr. Desai and the company only favored Indians," he said.

But from the perspective of the employees, the workplace was changing.

The IT staff had been diverse, and represented seemingly every nationality, much like the population of Long Beach, Calif., where Molina is based.

The employees said they liked working at Molina, and felt they were recognized for their work, supported on the job, and were also part of a friendly environment that marked holidays with events like potluck dinners.

But the corporate culture changed as the contractors were added. The holiday potluck dinners ended while Indian workers were taken out to lunch on a major India holiday, the former Molina employees said.

Some meetings became so dominated by Indian workers that the discussions would sometimes shift to an Indian language, which added to a growing sense of isolation among the other Molina IT employees, the workers said.

"I've been to several meetings where it started off in English and then one of the Indian directors would start talking in Hindi, and then all the other Indians will start talking in the same language," said a plaintiff who asked to remain anonymous. "And then you would have to say 'hello, hello, we don't understand.'"

The HR manager who had been hired to manage the IT layoffs recalled an initial visit to the IT department. "When I walked in the IT department, all I saw were Indians. It was very difficult to find anybody in the immediate environment that was of non-Indian descent."

The former HR manager said the makeup of the department "was also a reflection of the leadership team ... the majority of [Desai's] direct reports were Indian."

The Molina workers said they trained Cognizant workers on the company's IT processes over time prior to the layoffs. They were told that the contractors were taking over all the production and their role would shift to new developments and technologies.

That explanation did little to lessen fears that they were being pushed aside. "There was a point where I felt we were just being written off," said David de Hilster, one of the laid-off IT professionals.

In the weeks leading up to the layoff, Molina employees began spending more and more time training Cognizant workers. The process became increasingly "urgent" and rushed, he said.

Another laid-off employee, Charles, said that "one person came into our department to learn all of our processes, which is impossible. We're multiple types of employees doing deployments, doing development work. No one person could possibly gather all that much knowledge in two weeks' time."

Charles asked that his last name not be used.

Desai's attorney, Raskin, wrote that his client "was trying to maintain quality and keep IT costs down at the direction of his superiors. To accomplish this, Mr. Desai worked with his managers to identify processes and projects that could be outsourced at a lower cost.

"The question was not: 'Whose job can we eliminate and replace with a contractor?' The question was: What processes are being done in-house that could be outsourced at a lower overall cost without sacrificing quality of efficiency?" he added.

Otto has assembled witnesses to support the lawsuit.

Among them is Laura Onufrock, Molina's former IT department budget manager.

In lawsuit filings, Molina said it compared the cost of imported labor to the cost of U.S. workers at the company and found that the average pay for U. S. workers was $50 per hour versus $72 per hour for the Indian contractors and $26 an hour for offshore workers, according to the lawsuit. Based on Onufrock's analysis, the lawsuit claims that after the mass layoff last year, the IT department exceeded its annual budget by over $5.5 million three months into 2010.

Onufrock isn't a plaintiff. Asked why she was acting as a witness in this case, she said, "they've done a lot of damage to people and I'm hoping I can help."

Molina disputes the contention that the outsourcing efforts didn't cut IT costs.

"American taxpayers are demanding that health care companies reduce administrative costs in order to provide better benefits at a lower price," the company said in a statement.

"Like most leading health care companies, Molina has put in place a variety of measures to reduce costs, including the outsourcing of labor-intensive administrative tasks to specialized firms. Working with Cognizant, an established leader in outsourcing, Molina embarked on a successful program to reduce its overhead so it could focus on what it does best: providing America's underserved communities with access to the best possible health care," the company said.

It is unclear how many Molina contractors were on either H-1B or L-1 visas, which are used for company transfers. The distinction is important.

Companies can hire H-1B workers without first trying to hire U.S. workers, unless they are considered "H-1B dependent" -- a status that applies to companies where more than 15% of the people in the workforce hold H-1B visas. Cognizant is in that category, but it doesn't have to prove that it tried to hire U.S. citizens before hiring H-1B visa holders for jobs that pay more than $60,000 and/or require master's degrees.

"I don't think the H-1B dependent provisions are strong enough to protect U.S. workers," said Daniel Costa, an immigration policy analyst at the Economic Policy Institute.

Molina, which employs 4,200 people, said it has less than 50 H-1B employees "and they were hired only in cases when it was necessary to cast a wider net for particular skills."

A Cognizant spokesperson said that the company has never had an employer-employee relationship "between the plaintiffs and Cognizant, and therefore the plaintiffs have no grounds for, among other things, the employment discrimination or wrongful termination claims against Cognizant."

Cognizant employs 118,000 people worldwide -- 20,000 in the U.S. The outsourcer doesn't disclose how many of its workers hold visas.

But the company did note that it has more than 60 full-time recruiters in the U.S., and that it recruited at 17 colleges and universities last year. It said it has 500 job openings in the U.S.

"Cognizant is a job creator that strives to provide our clients with the best talent available anywhere," the company spokesperson said.

A week after the layoffs at Molina, one of the fired employees said she was told by someone still working there that about 30 H-1B hiring notifications had been posted on a lunchroom bulletin board at the company. The posting indicated that U.S. workers couldn't be found for these positions. It is unclear what company was trying to fill the positions. But this wasn't the first time such notices had appeared, and it reminded this employee of what she had said earlier to someone in HR who was involved in recruitment.

"How dare you hire H-1Bs when there are so many unemployed Americans out there that fit the job description better?" the IT worker said.

It's 75% porn if you visit porn sites 75% of the time. Oh, and spam has largely disappeared. People wised up to it, so the creeps have moved onto other methods.

So, let's see if I've got this straight. You don't read books, see movies, read newspapers or magazines, watch TV, attend college, use the internet, because they're not free, and it takes efforts.

Doesn't that make you a complete boob?

How about FM radio? That's almost all leftist crap, and there's a lot more FM stations than AM stations.

To each their own...but I don't care for the "Sleazy Sisters".

1) They are picking junk they could get at any junkyard within 5 miles of their home. No need to travel all around the country.

2) They are pickin' junk in their short shorts and go-go boots. Real practical. Hope they've had their tetanus shots.

3) They're always prancing around and wiggling their asses for the camera.

4) When they kiss an old geezer who sells them something, they make sure they press their boobs into the old geezer.

Your mileage may vary, but IMHO it is just a bare-faced, sleazy "T&A" (tits and ass) rip off of American Pickers.

That is ludicrous. The mass media is owned by defense contractors (NBC) and people who made money doing gangster stuff (CBS) and (I don't know how to classify Disney; a company built entirely on Stepford children).

Newscorp (slightly to the right of Ayn Rand) brags they control 30% of the media all by themselves, so that leaves 70% to be split up by Time Warner (right wing), Viacom (neutral to center right), Disney (creepy fascist), Comcast (right), General Electric (nuclear behemoth), Cox (rightish), Citadel (uber right), Clear Channel/Premiere (quite Right), etc.

The fact you'd even repeat such an obvious untruth is a testament to your brainwashing.

We are talking about the information potential voters get prior to an election. If you turn on a car radio in Texas (or most states) chances are you are not going to hear anything but right wing propaganda (AM or FM).

I'm going to overlook the rudeness, because of the company you keep.

I pay to watch TV because I live in the mountains. I can barely afford it. I have a DSL connection that I will probably drop in a couple months when my year is up.

No FM to speak of here. KROQ and KPCC. Haven't heard any political advocacy on either. We have an AM station that is totally right wing. Same goes for our local cable channel.

This is in spite of this city voting for Obama 53% to 47%. To listen to the radio you'd think he was Son of Moamar.

The most recent dubious assertion is that every hour of TV you watch, you lose 22 minutes of life. As Olbermann pointed out, one would think you would lose an hour..

If this were the case, most of us boomers would have died some 20 years ago.

Dave is still under the illusion that the USA's Armed Service will follow an "Obama order" and shoot-n-bomb his own family and people that are sick and tired of the man in charge, who tossed the "The Buck Stops Here" sign.

My bet is, they strafe the living quarters of the Whitehouse, and bomb the snot outa Camp David where the retard is on vacation.

- The most recent dubious assertion is that
- every hour of TV you watch, you lose 22
- minutes of life.
- As Olbermann pointed out, one would think
- you would lose an hour..
- If this were the case, most of us boomers
- would have died some 20 years ago.
- :)

Now if'n an Hour has 60 Minutes; and during that Hour of TV Watching : You only lose 22 Minutes of Life... Then What Did Done
Happen to the 'other' 38 Minutes . . .

Doing-the-Math :
4-Hours of TV Watching a Day for 365 Days
-why-that's- 1460 Hours in a Year of TV Watching which uses up only 535 Hours of Life; and extending you Life by 925 Hours which is 1-Month & 1-Week & 1-Day & 13-Hours per Year -so- from Age 3 to 73 Years {70-Years} of Active TV Watching an Average TV Watcher could Gain ~65K Hours of Life :
7 Year & 4-Months & 3-Weeks & 1-Day & 22 Hours of Extra Life -so- the 73-Years becomes 80-Years+

it's the miracle of tv ! ~ RHF

Only communists read books in the store without paying for them. Why should the publisher give you their work for free? You also probably eat the food in the gourmet section while nobody's looking.

A guy who used to live next door to me, (that was before those lezzies moved into that house) I used to let him go to the food store with me, he didn't own a vehicle.I used to write down websites onto paper napkins in the Dangerous Walmart store cafeteria while I was having a cup of free Walmart store coffee and waiting for him to do his shopping.He used to accuse me of stealing because I was writing down those websites.

When I got home today I fixed me a ham and cheese sandwich and I drank a glass of Florida orange juice I had already bought at the store.

Definition of FASCISM
often capitalized : a political philosophy, movement, or regime (as that of the Fascisti) that exalts nation and often race above the individual and that stands for a centralized autocratic government headed by a dictatorial leader, severe economic and social regimentation, and forcible suppression of opposition

http://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/fascism

You is an asshole. Please illustrate for the class what Romney says that makes you think, and I use that particular word with great caution, Romney meets that defintion.

Or is that you are just so brainwashed you can only puke up the buzzwords like a Pavlovian parrot?

Just how insane are you?

I spent two weeks driving through Texas not to long ago, and there more certainly are far more liberal stations than conservative.

LA has no liberal radio stations?

According to you, the only stations your town has is a rock station,

"Corporations are people, my friend"

Corporations are formed to insulate people from the implications of their commercial action and to limit the potential downside to the individual. You can't be a person if you can't be punished.

Besides didn't you get the memo? He wasn't America's first Hawaiin

Ok, you can't prove it and I was right. The word facist is just the lexicon of the modern deranged progressive for anyone they don't like.

While your defintion describes corporations, and we understand you don't like corporations, it in no way defines or describes facism as it was practiced in the early 20th Century and is pretty much an insult to the victims of it.

But hey if repeating the usual blather works for you...

I use the word exactly the same as it was used in the 1930s because it is the proper word. I am not just idly casting aspersions.

Sexism, nationalism, religious fervor, militarism, machismo, voluntary stupidity, private armies, brownshirts at political rallies, etc. It's all happenning now, in 2011.

Obama's a fascist, too, if that makes you feel any better.

Must be liberals then. They are the ones who hate anyone of faith.

I certainly do not dislike Romney because of his faith. It's more like he's a fresher face of the old Republicans. Romneycare renders incapable of arguing against Obamacare. And just makes him annoying.

His faith has nothing to do with anything.

This troll has more than a dozen, at last count, not even trying, i got 29 different socks here. I got a close friend, in DC who does this as a hobby. He keeps sending me new ones. This troll covers about a dozen different groups. He has a lot of people looking for him. BTW, are you keeping up with the "Pirate Wars". ?

That's not a definition known to any but idiots.

The right neither hates nor despises Obama
It has contempt for him and the "useful idiots" who voted for him
We leave the hate to the left They're so good at it.

There's a ND7K who seems to be control operator who would relay to the National Weather Service. I can hear him today workiing a few stations. He has received a couple calls from hams who were affected but not severely (lost internet, etc). Time here is 1930 UTC.

Should start to hear stations from the affected area near sunset as the band lengthens a bit. Right now hearing mainly the Florida station (ND7K). Someone called in with a 3-4 ' storm surge at 1945 UTC. All quiet at 1959 UTC.

A nice find and just what I needed.

This afternoon, while passing a school on my bike, I see sticking out of a dumpster a hose reel thingy, perfect for reeling up about 500' of wire for a little mini local dxpedition.

I'd been thinking just how much fun it was going to be laying out the wire and then having to reel it all back in.

Anyway, I pulled it out of the dumpster, set it behind it, and went back for the car.

Problem solved!

Someone once said that an atheist is someone without invisible means of support.

Then there was:

Christianity = The belief that a cosmic Jewish Zombie who was his own father can make you live forever if you symbolically eat his flesh and telepathically tell him you accept him as your master, so he can remove an evil force from your soul that is present in humanity because a rib-woman was convinced by a talking snake to eat from a magical tree..

NPR is not so extreme : it is all relative. Some FM stations are totally whacked out . For instance- Pacifica Radio . . .

If you want to hear local hurricane coverage and enjoy the challenge of MW DXing, here's a list of MW 50kw flamethrowers along or near hurricane Irene's projected path.

Stations marked ND have non-directional antennas, and are probably the easiest to hear.

Those marked DIR have directional patterns (at least at night) with at least some lobes pointing other than purely east.

Those marked DIR* have directional patterns (at least at night) that point east.

However, IIRC, the FCC may allow some DIR stations to broadcast a non-directional pattern during disasters such as hurricanes.

WBT 1110 khz Charlotte, NC DIR

WRVA 1140 khz Richmond, VA DIR

WFED 1500 khz Washington, DC DIR*

WBAL 1090 khz Baltimore, MD DIR*

KYW 1060 khz Philadelphia, PA DIR

WPHT 1210 khz Philadelphia, PA ND

WFAN 660 khz New York, NY ND

WOR 710 khz New York, NY DIR

WABC 770 khz New York, NY ND

WCBS 880 khz New York, NY ND

WINS 1010 khz New York, NY DIR*

WEPN 1050 khz New York, NY DIR*

WBBR 1130 khz New York, NY DIR*

WQEW 1560 khz New York, NY DIR

WTIC 1080 khz Hartford, CT DIR

WBZ 1030 khz Boston, MA DIR (points west!)

Jim, I keep the HWN, or the Maritime Mobil guys on 14.300 on, in the back-round here during the season. What is it, May to Oct/Nov.? Always interesting commo. Maybe, in a past life, I was a sailor. I sometimes go for the WEFAX/ or GOES. Fun stuff. Been trying to retire for 2 years now. I have all this gear here, and never home enough to really enjoy it. As the big broadcasters sunset, I find myself turning to more ute's. BTW, I'm in the ridge's of western PA. About 45 miles, east of Pittsburgh. Nice and quiet here. Just down the road, 2.5 miles from the Pitt/Carnegie-Mellon observatory. Very cool place. Lots of room for wire and loops. Love it.

Good DX!

- of the company you keep.

dave,,, Dave... DAVE ! ! !

?rudeness? with all your in-the-face
'proclaiming' you should expect a high degree of back-at-you's !

- I pay to watch TV because I live in the mountains.
- I can barely afford it.

So consider 'Free' Over-the-Air Satellite TV http://gofastmotorsports.com/rickssatellitehome.htm
- I have a DSL connection that I will probably
- drop in a couple months when my year is up.

One must make 'choices' -and- Live with-in their means.
- No FM to speak of here. KROQ and KPCC.
- Haven't heard any political advocacy on either.

Then 'you' must be politically tone-deaf to the NPR Liberal Indoctrination being spewed out by KPCC.
- We have an AM station that is totally right wing.

That should balance-out {off-set} KPCC's NPR 'programming' {Liberal Indoctrination} and APM & PRI along with extended coverage via KUOR & KPCV =s 800K Radicalized Left Wing Radio Listeners... http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/KPCC
- Same goes for our local cable channel.

How Does Any 'local' Cable Company Equate
To Being "Right-Wing" ?
Basic 36 Channels with FOX News -versus-ABC + CBS + NBC + MSNBC + PBS + CNN etc...
-that's-not-fair-&-balanced-
...and... With Multi-Channel OTA/SAT/CBL :
You have the Right-To-Listen/Watch {Tune-In}
-and-
The Equal Right-NOT-To-Listen/Watch {Tune-Out}
-cause-no-one-forces-you-to-watch-tv-
-a/o-any-specific-tv-channel-=You=Have=Choices=&=Freedom=To=Choose=

-or- is the 'local' Cable Community "Access" Channel ? Right-Wing ?

? Have 'you' consider this Dave -that- It is 'you' who is the Odd-Ball in a otherwise normal community of like minded rural* people !
* down-home 'country' down-to-earth
dave - once again 'your' post proves that 'liberalism is a mental disorder' ~ RHF http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Liberalism_Is_a_Mental_Disorder
- This is in spite of this city voting for
- Obama 53% to 47%.

Most likely that will be reversed in 2012 as the false 'aura' of The Obama has been exposed by "BO"s failure and lack of executive leadership as the POTUS.

To listen to the radio you'd think he was Son of Moamar.

So Change the Radio Channel and Listen to something else; or Listen to your 'fav' Internet Radio Station. {Pacifica} -but-Don't Try and Force Your Radio Listening preferences on all the rest of the Members of your Community -cause- They Have The Equal Right To Listen and -ps- They Are
The Majority at least in your Rural Area.

ALEC and Its Tea Party Sugar Daddies

ALEC claims to be an independent, nonpartisan, public-private partnership, but the best metaphor for the organization is an aspen grove. An aspen grove appears to be a cluster of individual trees, but a look beneath the surface reveals that each tree is an offshoot of the same large root network, each tree genetically identical to the other.

In the case of ALEC, a common filament in that network is the Koch brothers, Charles and David. Through the profits of Wichita, Kan.-based Koch Industries (and other Koch-controlled corporations), the two billionaire brothers fund myriad right-wing public policy foundations.

ALEC has received significant funding from the Charles Koch Foundation (CKF), which also funds the Cato Institute, a libertarian think tank. In 1974, Cato was originally incorporated as The Charles Koch Foundation. David Koch is currently on its board of directors.

David Koch is also a trustee of The Reason Foundation, a libertarian public policy institute and prominent ALEC member that promotes the privatization of government (and also receives CKF funding). Michael Flynn, Reason's current director of government affairs, served as a director of ALEC policy and legislative activities/strategic initiatives for several years ending in 2003.

David Koch also currently chairs the Americans for Prosperity Foundation (AFPF), formerly known as the Citizens for a Sound Economy Educational Foundation (another prominent ALEC-contributor), largely funded by CKF and Koch Industries. Joining him on that board is Koch Industries Executive Vice President Richard Fink, who is also the former executive vice president of the Mercatus Center, yet another Koch-funded, right-wing ALEC public policy member.

In 2003, AFPF incarnated two more foundations: Americans for Prosperity and FreedomWorks. As noted in AFPF's 2003 tax records, the group paid U.S. House Majority Leader Dick Armey (R-Texas) $429,583, via FreedomWorks, as a "consultant"--his first year salary as chairman of FreedomWorks.

As Kate Zernike noted in our October 2010 cover story, "Tea Party Confidential," Armey and the group's president Matt Kibbe wrote an op-ed article in 2007 proposing the Boston Tea Party as a model for putting grassroots pressure on a central government. She writes, "Presaging Tea Party tactics in the summer of 2009, they described how Samuel Adams packed town hall meetings with his supporters to drown out Tory voices and used each new British policy or tax as 'an excuse to rally new recruits to the cause of American independence.' They wrote, 'Adams was the first American to recognize that "it does not require a majority to prevail, but rather, an irate, tireless minority keen to set brush fires in people's minds.' "

Beginning in 2009, FreedomWorks was instrumental in creating the faux-populist Tea Party. The mainstream media uncritically hyped the scores of Tea Party tax day protests orchestrated by FreedomWorks and the National Taxpayers Union (another Koch-funded ALEC group headed by former ALEC executive director Duane Parde), thus helping enable unprecedented Republican legislative majorities in states across the nation.

Seems like a waste of money nowadays. You can get a killer SDR for $900 that'll do sync detection without a host receiver.

I get broadcast basic cable, which is what it sounds like. No over the air TV. No cablle TV [not even] news. I am surrounded by close-in ridgelines, around 300' above me, except due south. Mt. Wilson is 3 ridgelines away, behind 5,100' Magic Mountain.

I have asked you repeatedly, over many months, to give an example of NPR advocating a partisan position. Judging by your lack of even a single cogent response I must presume the following:

To some people, facts have a liberal bias.

"The North American pirate radio war of 2011, was largely caused by the extensive use of sock-puppets by 'Commander Bunny', of WBNY (aka 'Pat Murphy'), to control and dominate the Free Radio Network, a long-standing forum devoted to shortwave pirate radio listening. The most active sock-puppets were exposed by John Poet of The Crystal Ship pirate radio station, as well as by Guise Faux of the satirical Radio Paranoia blog. Poet and TCS were subsequently caught be the FCC. Poet and many pirate DXers believe the FCC was given helpful information by FCC snitches 'Commander Bunny' & 'Kracker'."

I am a bit north of Detroit. It's usually pretty quiet here, though don't have room for a really large antenna.

I notice that I don't hear too many east coast operators giving reports about their own areas on the hurricane net. I think the best way to get information is from one of the WAS (worked all states) amateur nets. I listen to the 40 meter Century Club on 7178kHz at 2300UTC and get reports direct from each state. If someone disappears from the net then you know its bad in that area. But usually they will get on the radio for a minute and say, "It's really bad . I am shutting down". I will be listening tonight and see if anyone from North Carolina checks in.

In fact, usually a couple guys from NC check in on our afternoon net on 7238 kHz and today they were absent.

HERE'S AN UPDATED LIST:

If you want to hear local hurricane coverage and enjoy the challenge of MW DXing, here's a list of MW 50kw flamethrowers along or near hurricane Irene's projected path.

Stations marked ND have non-directional antennas, and are probably the easiest to hear.

Those marked DIR have directional patterns (at least at night) with at least some lobes pointing other than purely east.

Those marked DIR* have directional patterns (at least at night) that point east.

However, IIRC, the FCC may allow some DIR stations to broadcast a non-directional pattern during disasters such as hurricanes. That's why the list includes WTAR-850; although it's 25kw DIR* at night, it may be readable to the northwest if it uses its daytime pattern.

WPTF 680 khz Raleigh, NC DIR

WBT 1110 khz Charlotte, NC DIR

WTAR 850 khz Norfolk, VA DIR* (25kw - see above)

WRVA 1140 khz Richmond, VA DIR

WFED 1500 khz Washington, DC DIR*

WBAL 1090 khz Baltimore, MD DIR*

KYW 1060 khz Philadelphia, PA DIR

WPHT 1210 khz Philadelphia, PA ND

WFAN 660 khz New York, NY ND

WOR 710 khz New York, NY DIR

WABC 770 khz New York, NY ND

WCBS 880 khz New York, NY ND

WINS 1010 khz New York, NY DIR*

WBBR 1130 khz New York, NY DIR*

WQEW 1560 khz New York, NY DIR

WTIC 1080 khz Hartford, CT DIR

WRKO 680 khz Boston, MA DIR

WEEI 850 khz Boston, MA DIR*

WBZ 1030 khz Boston, MA DIR (points west!)

WWZN 1510 khz Boston, MA DIR*

WGY 810 khz Schenectady, NY ND

Liberty Net: August 20, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/08/liberty-net-august-20-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THERE IS A CONVERGENCE of free political thought these days, as the hot knife of crisis cuts through the phony left-right / Republican-Democrat paradigm. As more and more people find themselves bled dry by the financial elite, the warmongers, and the vote-buyers, the old labels just donï¿½t have much meaning anymore. Participate in the awakening by checking into the Liberty Net!

Hereï¿½s a very brief summary of some of the topics discussed this time on amateur radioï¿½s longest-running discussion net:

ï¿½ Even when they _try_ to depreciate their currency, as they did recently, the Swiss franc seems incapable of dropping much in value. This says something about the inherent quality of Swiss society and the Swiss people. (10 minutes)

ï¿½ The FDIC has $19 billion in reserve to ï¿½insureï¿½ $4,400 billion in personal bank accounts. Thatï¿½s like insuring a precious diamond ring with a $20 bill. (49 minutes)

ï¿½ Democrats support the Mestizo invasion because they see the invaders as ï¿½instant democrats.ï¿½ Republicans support the invasion because they like union-busting and cheap labor. Both are knowingly participating in the genocide of Americaï¿½s founding stock. (59 minutes)

ï¿½ In a single manï¿½s lifetime, the banks and the government have inflated away 97% of the dollarï¿½s value ï¿½ and now they are accelerating the process. (1 hour 11 minutes)

ï¿½ Isnï¿½t it great that our ï¿½peace presidentï¿½ has now officially extended the regimeï¿½s ï¿½missionï¿½ in Afghanistan to the year 2024? (1 hour 28 minutes)

ï¿½ With the fall of the dollar, metal prices have soared, so much so that thieves have been climbing cell towers to steal copper feed lines, and climbing houses to steal downspouts. (1 hour 30 minutes)

ï¿½ An inductance meter can be used as a highly reliable, and non-destructive, detector of counterfeit gold or silver coins. (1 hour 34 minutes)

ï¿½ Are all the hints being dropped by the regime that ï¿½there might be an attackï¿½ on the tenth anniversary of 9/11 a sign that we should be on the lookout for a false flag attack encouraged or engineered by that very regime? (3 hours 2 minutes)

ï¿½ As the regime in Washington expands their police/surveillance/national-security state with each passing day, how can its minions have the temerity to point a finger of accusation at Libya or Syria for supposed human rights violations? (3 hours 9 minutes)

Remember that you can receive the Liberty Net in the area of 3950 kHz and above (lately, often on or near 3980 kHz)) every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time ï¿½ or listen live on the Internet via N2SAG or N2IRJ. And you can listen at your leisure via the mp3 files posted here at http://3950.net every week. Each Saturday nightï¿½s mp3 file is usually posted on the next morning ï¿½ Sunday ï¿½ and will be visible that day in the upper right column of this site.

Once again, thanks to W1WCR for running this important and historic discussion net, and thanks also to N2IRJ for making these recordings available.

This board has been (at times) as much about spook shit as it has been about shortwave. Propaganda and Psyops go hand in hand with international broadcasting and utilities comms; they always have.

To recognize propaganda you need to be "above the fray". If you aren't a master then you are a fool. When I see brainwashed people doing rote repetition of carefully crafted memes I lose it, because I know you used to be smarter than that.

There is no difference who you elect. They will do the bidding of the people who pay their media bills. Not you. Not me.

I started hanging drywall when I was 14. Learned how to make that kicker when I was 22 or so. Then the guy who taught me disappeared for the rest of the day (to get supplies).

Tempting. I need at least a 36" dish and a positioner. I don't watch a lot of TV. Maybe if someone gave some used crap off a junk pile I can repair it.

KGIL 1260 is dreary classical music, not progressive talk. We have 90.7
KPFK which didn't make your list. They invented left wing radio, Pacifica did. I can get the AM during the day. KPFK comes in like shit.
I get KFI and KSPN really well. And 610 after local sunset.

The best signal in Socal comes from Rosarito Baja California XERB Double X 1090. They claim 50 KW but (out here in the far field) the signal is more robust than other stations with similar power.

ARLP034 Propagation de K7RA

Solar activity rose this week, with the average daily sunspot number increasing over 40 points to 66, and average daily solar flux up over 13 points to 101.9.

Predicted solar flux for August 26 is 110, and 115 for August 27-28, 110 for August 29 to September 1, 105 for September 2-3, 100 for September 4-5, 95 on September 6-7, and bottoming out at 90 on September 8-12. The next peak of activity is predicted for September 22-23.

Predicted planetary A index is 5 for August 26-27, 10 on August 28, 8 on August 29, and 5 on August 30 through September 2, then 8 on September 3, 10 on September 4-6, 7 on September 7, and 5 on September 8-10.

Geophysical Institute Prague predicts quiet conditions for August 26, unsettled on August 27-28, quiet to unsettled August 29 and quiet conditions on August 30 through September 1.

A story forwarded from a British newspaper by a reader warned that "a huge mass of electrically charged particles thrown out by a giant eruption on the Sun is due to strike the earth tonight." But the article itself is undated, and the web page continuously updates to show the current date. The link to the article was sent to me on August 21, but the event didn't happen then, and is not happening now, nor is such an event predicted for the next few days. Down the left margin of the page are ads for astrologers, and on the right margin are links to over 80 stories about celebrity gossip.

If you do a web search for phrases from the article - which is at http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-200952/power-cuts-threat-sun-storm-hits-earth.html - you find it quoted all over the net by people assuming that this is about to happen, some of them quite alarmed. But looking at the latest prediction from NOAA/USAF at http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/ftpmenu/forecasts/45DF.html shows no predicted rise in the A index, which would be large if such an event were predicted.

So what date was the article published? I doubt if this newspaper has had a science editor for a number of years, so perhaps they keep running the same article with its dire warnings, and only the celebrity gossip changes.

The key to the date of this article lies in searching the newspaper archive for the headline. If you enter a portion of the headline into the search box next to the article, the actual date is revealed: October 29, 2003. This is nearly eight years ago. Now we know why nobody predicted this event. In these fast moving times, 2003 might seem to some like ancient history.

Try doing a web search of a phrase from this article. Some of the results are quite funny. You will see it referenced all over the web as if it just happened and were breaking news.

Last week's bulletin mentioned the new issue of WorldRadio expected last Saturday, which would have an updated propagation column by K9LA. The new September issue didn't actually appear online until several days later. You can read it now at http://www.worldradiomagazine.com.

The propagation column by K9LA, Carl Luetzelschwab pays tribute to the late Bob Brown, NM7M and his writings about propagation for the amateur community. Carl mentions that one of Bob's popular books is available for download from Carl's web site. Just go to http://myplace.frontier.com/~k9la/ and click on General on the left side of the page, then right-click the link for "Little Pistol's Guide to HF Propagation" to download the PDF.

We are just a few weeks away from the Autumnal Equinox, a time when we see better HF propagation than we did during the summer. You can check the effect of seasonal change by running two instances of a propagation program, and switching back and forth to see the same projection over two different dates.

You can download W6ELprop from http://www.qsl.net/w6elprop/ and try what I did, which was to compare August 2 with September 22. The predicted smoothed sunspot number for August was 59, and for September it is 62. You could use those numbers, or use the same sunspot number on both projections to isolate the seasonal effect.

I ran my projection between Atlanta, Georgia and England. You bring up Atlanta coordinates in W6ELprop by entering the prefix W4, and England with the G prefix. You can see the generally improved signal strengths and longer openings in the September prediction.

If you want the latest smoothed sunspot numbers for this month and off into the future, go to http://www.swpc.noaa.gov/weekly/pdf/prf1875.pdf and look at the table on page 18. Every 4-5 issues they have an updated projection for the current solar cycle.

Finally, do you think Cycle 24 is weaker and still progressing slower than previous solar cycles? You are correct. For a comparison of Cycles 21, 22, 23 and 24, check http://www.solen.info/solar/cyclcomp.html.

Sunspot numbers for August 18 through 24 were 53, 46, 59, 66, 82, 81, and 75, with a mean of 66. 10.7 cm flux was 97.8, 98.2, 100.5, 100.9, 108.2, 103.7, and 104.1, with a mean of 101.9. Estimated planetary A indices were 3, 2, 5, 3, 7, 9, and 6, with a mean of 5. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 1, 1, 4, 3, 5, 8, and 5, with a mean of 3.9.

You've obviously never worked an overnighter in Master Control. We got a printed guide back then that showed everything. I still carry a compass and an inclinometer in my vehicle. Nobody can find a satellite as fast as I can on a polar, or on an azel. Got a Channel Master S-meter too, from Camping World.

I took it apart as soon as I got it, of course. They are the only manufacturer with a warranty that isn't voided by the end user when he opens the cover and "attempts" repairs. They prefer that you call them if you want help, and avoid getting guidance from the web.

The Fred Shirley who went to Forest Hill School was a regular mild mannered guy.He didn't do much jesting either.

Mrs.Ferguson (she was a very stern woman) ran the big old library at the old Forest Hill school, one of my sisters and some of her friends used to call it Ferguson's Funeral Home.

About 18 - 20 something years ago that old school was torn down and a new 'modern' school was built in it's place.It looks Horrible!

My last class every day was in a room that had a big old fire escape, wooden stars to the ground.When the bell rang, most of us would step out one of the windows and run down the stairs to the school buses.

rec.radio.cb,alt.usenet.kooks,rec.radio.amateur.policy, comp.os.os2.advocacy,rec.radio.shortwave, kb9rqz?

Economic meltdown? Are you an idiot or just a brain washed fool spouting the political correct terms which they have "wrote learned" into your empty head?

This has been the wholesale theft of the wealth of middleclass and lower (well, upper middle too.)

Now, wash the bullshit out of your mouth, it leaves us with a foul smell ...

Red meat brought Americans to the pinnacle of health and boosted life expectancy by decades ... now the damn fools don't want the expense of their slaves eating meat. Seems we can count on bowls of rice so as we can eat cheap and compete with the chinese slave working and living in the same sweat houses which make their lives miserable ... and fools with no sense are cheerleaders for the doom and gloom to strike us in the future ...

If your eyes tell you one thing, and your slave masters another, always go for the eyes ... in more ways than one! <grin>
